Senate Delays OPA Bill Debate; Compromise Hit

Porter Limits His Backing to Barkley Substitute for Taft, Wherry Profit Plans

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Nation last night headed into another price holiday week.

The Senate received an OPA revival compromise, marked it "unfinished business," then postponed debate until Monday.

The compromise itself was hit from these directions:

1. Price Administrator Paul Porter confined his indorsement to the Barkley substitute for the price-lifting Taft-Wherry amendments. Porter renewed his call for elimination of "other undesirable features."

2. Senators Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), and Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.), introduced variations of their original cost-plus amendments. Wherry followed up with three other amendments just as likely to invite another veto. These, separately and in combination, would permanently free from any controls meat, poultry and dairy products.

Leaders Plainly Unhappy

Senate leaders were plainly unhappy about Porter's statement. Leaders set their sights for passage of compromise legislation by midweek. OPA opponents, however, predicted "at least a week of debate."

Growing Democratic Party solidarity behind the so-called Barkley substitute, removing most objectionable features of the Taft-Wherry originals, improved prospects that the Senate will at least pass a pricing formula the Administration can accept.

The chief danger was that Senate Democrats might again bolt party lines to support Wherry's meat-poultry-dairy decontrols, practically spiking prospects of a presidential signature. Leaders appeared equally concerned lest the bill run into dilatory debate or a filibuster that would prolong the price holiday.

Porter Explains Comments

Porter issued his statement after Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley (D. Ky.), quoted him Thursday as saying the bill written by the committee was "workable" and he would not recommend veto.

In his own statement, Porter said:

"My comments yesterday afternoon upon leaving the Senate Banking and Currency Committe applied only to the Barkley amendment as a substitute for the Taft and Wherry amendments to the price control bill.

"It did not represent blanket approval of the bill as a whole as reported out by the committee.

"I still hope that Congress will pass a bill that will conform to the President's recommendations in his veto message, and that other undesirable features will be eliminated."

Barkley came back with an enigmatic "No comment!"

Called Most Damaging

The President objected fundamentally to the Taft-Wherry amendments as "most damaging," but the compromise would send back without change virtually all of the other contested provisions of the vetoed bill. For example, the bill still transfers authority over food prices to the Secretary of Agriculture, abolishes OPA orders requiring manufacturers produce low-cost clothing, and provides privileged treatment for cotton and woolen textiles, automobile dealers and household appliance distributors.

As the compromise extension was launched in the Senate, OPA ran into appropriations trouble. Sen-

Sam Snead Wins British Open

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 5 (AP). Slammin' Sam Snead of Hot Springs, Va., playing conservative golf in a high wind which once blew him off his feet and the other contenders out of the running, won the British Open Golf Championship today with a 72-hole score of 290, two under par, to give the United States its first victory in the tournament since 1933.

Although going over par on both rounds today, the Virginia hill billy coasted to victory with a four-stroke margin over Johnny Bulla of Chicago, and Bobby Locke, the pre-tournament favorite from South Africa, both of whom wound up with 294's.

Nine Seized In New Raids On Lotteries

Capt. Robert Pearce, newly assigned commander of the First Precinct, renewed his war on numbers racketeers yesterday with the arrest of nine persons in a series of gaming raids.

One raid—in the first floor at 408 1st st. nw., which is less than a block from the stationhouse—netted five arrests, about $4000 worth of numbers slips, and about $650 in cash.

Captain Pearce, who personally led two of yesterday's raids, swooped down on a numbers headquarters at 609 New Jersey ave. nw., also near the stationhouse, last Wednesday and five persons were arrested. He has been back on the job less than a week.

Captain Pearce, Sergt. Abel Mann and Detectives D. R. Webber and J. W. Hayes entered the first floor dwelling at 408 1st st. nw., at 1:30 p. m. Two women, Hattie Richardson, 54, of the 1st st. address, and Catherine DeNeil, 48, of 1536 5th st. nw., were arrested.

One of the women led the police party to a "pickup" spot at 2d and

Senate Group Votes Teachers Flat $450 Rise

Two-Span Bridge Also Approved by District Committee

By Edward Ryan
Post Reporter

A flat $450 salary increase for Washington school teachers received unanimous approval of the Senate District Committee yesterday.

Acting Chairman Hoey (D., N. C.) announced after an executive session the committee had agreed to the increased pay for one year, with a requirement that the Board of Education study present pay schedules and recommend adjustments to the next session of Congress.

The report was a substitute answer to demands of Senator McCarran (D., Nev.) that the pay increase bill should include an adjustment formula whereby the pay of high school teachers would be granted to teachers in the lower grades if they held a master's degree.

Would Assure Review

While the adjustment formula was erased, the one-year limitation on the pay increase, and the required report, would make a review of school salaries sure within the next 12 months.

In other decisions, the Senate committee insured early congressional approval for a two-span replacement of Highway Bridge, and also indorsed a bill by McCarran to let the District recorder of deeds' office close on Saturdays.

The bridge bill, approved by the House Tuesday, was indorsed unanimously by the Senate group without a hearing. Senator Hoey pointed out that the main controversy over whether there should

Prices Continue Slow Rise; Livestock Market Tapers Off

By the Associated Press

The cost of many essential food items continued to inch upward yesterday as the Nation neared the end of its first postwar week free from Government price controls.

Wholesale prices of meat, butter and eggs increased slightly in New York City while in Chicago the livestock market tapered off.

The New York Stock Exchange had one of its slowest days in months with stocks quiet.

General Mills, Inc., said in Chicago it was selling flour and cereal products "for immediate shipment only," the firm said it was not committing itself to any set price until a new OPA bill "is either passed or not passed." Several other companies are doing likewise, a spokesman said.

A threat of a buyers' strike came from Louisville, Ky., where the Jefferson County Citizens Political Action Committee said persons who raise rents or prices may be picketed.

The New York Mercantile Exchange said butter was up a half cent a pound in the wholesale market, in line with Chicago and other Western markets.

Grade A butter prices hit 71½ cents, indicating a retail price in independent stores of about 85 or 86 cents a pound. The OPA ceiling price was 68 cents.

Soviet Stand Threatens Parley Delay

Molotov Insists That Invitations State Procedure For Peace Talks

Paris, July 5 (INS).—The threat of new delays in calling the July 29 peace conference emerged at the Big Four Foreign Ministers' conference today when Russia demanded that invitations to the parley include the rules of procedure.

Soviet insistence on this point, apparently designed to prevent Russia from being outvoted at the 21-nation conference, threw the meeting into discord and confusion.

U. S. Secretary of State Byrnes and British Foreign Secretary Bevin were admittedly perplexed over Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov's strategy in demanding the procedural rules be fixed now. Byrnes always has urged that all conferences fix their own rules.

Old Charge is Hurled

At one point, the old charge of "delaying tactics" was hurled against Molotov by Byrnes after a series of disputes arose.

First, there was a long argument as to whether the issuing of invitations should even be discussed.

Then Molotov objected to the American proposal that China be named as one of the inviting powers, along with the Big Four.

The procedural question arose next and then Molotov insisted on a discussion of the German problem tomorrow, instead of devoting that session to the pressing peace conference matter.

During the course of the arguments, Byrnes interjected with:

"I stayed here until midnight last night to let you get your money. (A reference to the agreement on Italian reparations to Russia.)

"I am willing to stay up until midnight again to prevent you from blocking world peace."

Supported by Bevin

On the question of China's inclusion as one of the sponsor powers, Byrnes was supported by Bevin.

The American Secretary of State insisted that China should be named inasmuch as this was provided for under the Potsdam and Moscow agreements.

Molotov refused to give in and finally suggested another night session be held to get the problem of Germany's future out of the way to clear the decks for the invitation issue.

Byrnes, exasperated, declared:

"I held Gen. (Lucius) Clay (deputy American military governor in Germany) in Paris for five days awaiting the discussion. Now I have sent him back to Germany, Molotov wants to spring the talks on a few minutes' notice."

Byrnes said the Russian had directed a "gratuitous insult" at China by refusing to include her as one of the inviting powers.

Called Worst Day Yet

After nearly four hours of wrangling over the invitation question, one delegate declared:

"This is far and away the worst day we ever had.

"I begin to wonder whether we can ever get along together?"

Byrnes is understood to be seeking speedy agreement on the invitation text so the conference can be adjourned and the decks cleared for the projected peace conference.

It is reported Byrnes has a plan to name special deputies to examine the entangled problem of Germany, without immediate action on the part of the foreign ministers themselves.

It was learned that France will not demand settlement of the Ruhr and Rhine issues immediately, if an agreement is reached to detach the Saar so that France can obtain some of its coal production.

British Fear Widespread Arab Revolt

See Possibility Of Outside Tribes Joining Rebellion

London, July 5 (AP).—Possibility of an Arab rebellion in Palestine, aided and abetted by Arabs from neighboring states, was advanced authoritatively today in the wake of growing concern over Britain's policy in the Holy Land.

Sources close to the Attlee government expressed the view that Britain—while concerned about the effect of her actions in Palestine on Anglo-American relations—still was unwilling to alienate the Arab nations and risk the British position in the Middle East.

This was the British view as given authoritatively:

The Arabs in Palestine seem "in the mood" to oppose with violence British policy unsatisfactory to them, and the possibility of an Arab rebellion, taking in Arabs from adjoining states, is being considered by the British government.

Britain has found nothing objectionable in her dealings with the United States on the question. Britain would object to attempts of pressure groups to force a policy "beyond British means."

Deprecate Use of Force

At the same time, it was said Britain could not hold down the Arabs by force and did not even want to attempt it.

Another reason for the British handling of the Anglo-American committee's report—which recommended immigration of 100,000 European Jews into Palestine—was understood to be that failure to consider Arab wishes would be undemocratic inasmuch as Arabs make up two thirds of Palestine's population.

It was said there was no great evidence of intense Russian activity in Palestine, and it was believed Soviet action, if any, prob-

Fatality Toll For Holiday Reaches 227

By the Associated Press

The Nation's violent death toll rose to 227 as the half way mark neared in the long Independence Day weekend.

The fatalities—well below advance forecasts of the National Safety Council—indicated most vacationists were mixing caution with pleasure.

The council estimated the holiday would result in 1300 violent deaths, 450 of them in traffic.

Up to late yesterday, 100 persons were killed in traffic, 51 drowned and 54 died from miscellaneous causes.

Ohio led the States with 17 deaths, nine in traffic mishaps.

Pennsylvania recorded no traffic deaths in the first 48 hours, a sharp contrast to Memorial Day when it led the Nation in such fatalities.

In Polish Pogrom

Lie by Youth Held Causing 40 Jew Deaths

Kielce, Poland, July 5 (U.P.).—A tow-headed, fat-faced boy of 11 shrugged and grinned unconcernedly tonight when told that the lie he had been coached to tell had set off a bloody anti-Jewish pogrom in which 40 persons were killed and 60 wounded.

In a bare room of the city jail, little Henryk Blaszczyk repeated the lie authorities blamed for the tragedy—the lie that he had been kidnaped by Jews, held captive for three days, and had seen the bodies of 15 Christian boys killed by them.

The youngster admitted he had run away from home on Monday, instead of being kidnaped, and that he had been coached to tell the lie by a farmer who gave him shelter. Authorities believed the farmer actually was a member of the underground, purposely plotting a pogrom.

Rumor Spreads Fast

The boy returned home Wednesday and told the story to his father, who immediately took him to police. The rumor already was spreading—another indication of a plot, according to authorities—and the bloody program got underway.

As a result, the battered bodies of 36 Jews lay in rows in the municipal hospital. They included nine women and one prematurely born girl.

A Polish army second lieutenant, a member of the secret police and two non-Jewish Poles also were killed. All victims were beaten or kicked to death.

Sixty-two persons were arrested and authorities said they probably would be tried within a few days.

Officials said tonight they were afraid more atrocities would follow against the 100,000 Jews still in Poland, and predicted an increased exodus of Jews from Poland to Senate Backs Flood-Control Plan for D. C.

A $500,000 flood-control project in Washington was approved by the Senate yesterday.

The Washington flood project was included in a national flood-control program earlier approved by the House. No change was ordered in the money affecting the local program, but other changes written by the Senate will send the measure to conference.

According to Army Engineer plans, the extra flood protection in Washington calls for construction of levees in West Potomac Park, along with a removable flood barrier for 17th st. nw.

Other flood-control projects included in the bill for the Potomac River Basin were completion of the local flood-control project at Cumberland, Md., and Ridgely, W. Va., flood protection at Waynesboro, Va., and completion of the Savage River Dam in Maryland.

Allies' Order Fails to Stop Trieste Strike

2 Killed, 60 Injured In Walkout Held Due To Political Motives

Trieste, July 5 (AP).—The general strike of 200,000 workers continued today for the fourth day despite the decision of Allied military authorities that it was "illegal."

Allied authorities ruled yesterday that the strike, which has virtually paralyzed this hotly-disputed city, had political motives and therefore was out of order.

The strike was called Monday following riots between partisans of the left and right in which two persons were killed and 60 injured.

Some workers had returned to their jobs today, but port operations were still deadlocked and out of 10 ships in the port, one only—and that a military cargo vessel—was being unloaded.

Posters appeared during the night throughout Trieste demanding that the four-power foreign ministers' decision to internationalize the area not be put into effect.

Nats Lead Yanks, 6 to 0, in Second

The Nats batted Starter Mel Queen from the box to take a 6-to-0 lead over the New York Yankees after two innings of their game last night at Griffith Stadium.

FIRST INNING

NEW YORK—Rizzuto struck out. Stirnweiss was called out on strikes. Grace made a fine running catch in left center of Heinrich's looper. Nothing across.

WASHINGTON—Grace popped to Gordon. DiMaggio went back for Lewis' long drive. Spence grounded to Etten. Nothing across.

SECOND INNING

NEW YORK—Keller flied to Grace. DiMaggio popped to Priddy. Etten flied to Grace. Nothing across.

WASHINGTON—Vernon walked. Travis was out, Etten to Queen, who covered first. Priddy walked. Hitchcock singled to center, scoring Vernon. Priddy stopping at second. Early lined a single to center, scoring Priddy. Hitchcock going to third. Newsom bunted to the pitcher and when nobody covered first he was credited with a hit, filling the bases. Grace singled to center, scoring Hitchcock and Early. Newsom stopped at second. That was all for Queen, who was replaced by Wight. Gordon fumbled Lewis' grounder, filling the bases. Gordon threw out Spence, Newsom scoring, the other runners advancing. Vernon was given an intentional pass, again filling the bases. Grace scored and the other runners advanced on a wild pitch. Travis walked, again filling the bases. Heinrich made a fine running catch of Priddy's drive. Six runs, four hits, one error, three left.

Underwater A-Bomb Test Slated July 25

Adm. Blandy Admits Missile Was Way Off Target in First Try

Aboard the USS Mount McKinley, July 5 (AP).—The first underwater explosion of the atomic bomb, testing its power against ships' hulls, is planned tentatively for July 25 at Bikini, the Navy announced today.

It will be the second test of the bomb against the target fleet in the lagoon.

The first, an air burst, was acknowledged today by Vice Admiral W. H. P. Blandy to have exploded far short of the intended spot due to wind and other factors beyond the control of "even the most skilled people in the world."

But Blandy said the bomb, which sank five ships and caused varying damage to more than two-score others, proved a "complete success" even so. It also caused the deaths of about 10 per cent of 3600 animals aboard the fleet, the radiological specialist, Capt. Shields Warren, reported.

However, Blandy scaled down his previous estimate of what the underwater blast would do in the way of causing a tidal wave. Earlier he said a 100-foot wave could be expected. Toady he estimated it would not exceed 70 feet.

For the second test, the bomb will be suspended in a bathysphere-like container beneath a barge and will be detonated by radio impulse from a ship 20 miles away.

The bomb will be at least 18 feet below the surface.

Capitol Idea

Senate Is Long on Dignity, But Girl's Shorts Go in House

By the United Press

If the august members of the United States Senate want to look at lady gallerylites wearing shorts, they'll have to wander over to the House side of the Capitol to see them, it appeared last night.

Senate Sergeant at Arms Wall Doxey says so. Twice within three weeks he has permitted women in slacks to sit in the gallery, but he has officially frowned on shorts as not in keeping with senatorial dignity.

House Doorkeeper Ralph Roberts said, however, he didn't mind the abbreviated trousers a bit, so long as their wearers didn't parade around and act indecent.

At least two Senators are on record as doubting the reasoning of the Doxey ruling.

"In hot weather I am sometimes envious that I cannot wear shorts myself," Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) said. "Mr. Doxey is supposed to be an authority on what causes confusion in the Senate, but personally I have no objection to shorts."

Senator Burnet Maybank (D., S. C.) said he did not see how Doxey could make a "blanket rule" to cover all shorts-wearing women.

Senator Robt. A. Taft (R., Ohio) said he had no views on the subject—"There should be some restrictions, but I don't know what."

Doxey was forced to settle the issue a few weeks ago when some high school girls in shorts were admitted to a night session. He

Memo's Text Presented At Probe of War Profits

Ordnance Officers Say May Attended Batavia Concern's $16,000 Celebration

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A personal memorandum from Robert P. Patterson, then Undersecretary of War, forced the award of an Army-Navy "E" to one of a string of war boom companies built up on a "letterhead and shoestring" despite strenuous protests of Army Ordnance officers, they testified yesterday.

The memorandum was introduced before the Senate War Investigating Committee by Col. John Slezak, former chief of the Chicago ordnance department, who has now returned to his peacetime job as president of Turner Brass Co.

Celebrated at $16,000 Dinner

The award was later celebrated at a dinner, costing well over $16,000, which was attended by Chairman Andrew J. May (D., Ky.), of the House Military Affairs Committee.

Slezak bluntly told the committee that Chicago Ordnance officials had refused requests from Washington to recommend an award to Batavia Metal Products, Inc., because the company did not meet the standards for making such an award.

Maj. Gen. L. H. Campbell, jr., the Army's wartime Chief of Ordnance, testified that Ordnance had "nothing to do with the 'E award'" for Batavia metals.

He said that Slezak had refused to indorse such a recommendation and that the next thing he knew the company had the "E."

"From Someone Higher Up"

Under questioning on how it could happen that the award would be given for Ordnance work without any recommendation from his department, Campbell replied that the recommendation must have come from "someone higher-up the scale."

The Patterson memorandum and a transcript of a long distance telephone call concerning it between Slezak and Militon H. Pettit, who was in charge of E awards for Ordnance, were introduced after Campbell left the stand.

Asked Consideration on Merits

The Patterson memorandum was dated March 26, 1945, and addressed to Col. Robert Clark, in the awards branch of the Bureau of Public Relations.

It read:

"There is attached a memo from the chief of ordnance (Campbell) recommending that the Batavia Metal Products Co. be favorably considered for the Army and Navy 'E' award.

"My sole desire is to have this nomination considered on its merits, the decisive factor to be the achievement of the company in the production of munitions.

"The matter is not to be considered on account of any pressure to get an award for this concern, nor is the company to be prejudiced by reason of any friction between it and other agencies. I trust that the case can be considered at an early date. (Signed) Patterson."

The "memo" referred to by Patterson was a report from Gen. Roswell Hardy to his chief, General Campbell, stating that Batavia was now meeting its production schedules. Later testimony developed that they had been meeting them only during the month before the memo was submitted. It was not a recommendation for an "E" award as such.

"Most Unfortunate"

"Well, it is most unfortunate I would say," Slezak told Pettit, "regardless of what the Undersecretary's letter says asking that this case be considered on its merits. Apparently that is not being done. Never have we recommended a company on the same basis.

"We never have and if we would have given you facts similar in any other company, you would have turned it down."

Pettit replied that he didn't know but that at the request to con-

Fertilizer Output Spurred Abroad

In U. S. Zone

Harvest Data Discouraging To Germans

Stuttgart, Germany, July 5 (U.P.)—The food statistics branch of the German Council of States reported today this year's harvest in the American zone would be sufficient only to give each person a daily ration of "something less than 1000 calories."

A larger acreage was planted both in grain and potatoes this year than in 1945, but the German food experts said the yield would be considerably less, principally because of a lack of fertilizer. Even with ideal weather the yield per acre will be at least 25 per cent lower than in peace years, they said.

Some officials said the harvest would provide a maximum ration of only 750 calories a day.

Winter wheat acreage this year was 28,000 more than in 1945, yet this year's yield is expected to drop from the 855,107 tons of 1945 to 843,040 tons.

Early potatoes, one of the most important staple crops in Germany, averaged 54 tons an acre in 1945. This year's estimate is only 46 tons an acre.

The yield is expected to drop from 235,000 tons last year, to 224,000 tons this year.

The prospects for oil seed crops are even worse, and only 20 per cent o fthe planted acreage is expected to be harvested.

The daily ration in the American zone is 1275 calories a day. It was 1550 calories until March 25, when the world food shortage began to look serious.

The United States agreed to import 155,000 tons of bread grains into the American zone in May, June and July, but no commitments have been made beyond that.

Starvation Threat Persists

Wiesbaden, Germany, July 5 (U.P.)—Malnutrition is developing in Greater Hesse and there will be starvation within several months unless the food supply increases, Military Government officials said today.

Present stocks guarantee that rations can be held at current levels through July, the officials told visiting newsmen.

Fifty per cent or more of the children have rickets in some towns, and the child mortality rate is four times what it was three years ago, officials said.

Army Eases Policy On Chemical Plants Of Former Enemies

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Spurred by the threat of continued widespread famine in occupied enemy territories, the Army is relaxing some of its earlier "scorched earth" plans for destruction of enemy war plants.

Many factories, once turning out nitrogen and other chemicals for war use, are now being transformed into the peaceful manufacture of commercial fertilizers.

Some will be allowed to continue even after the peace is agreed upon and the territories released from occupation. Others will be allowed to operate only until the world shortage of fertilizer is overcome—a period all admit may extend several years.

The Army plan for operation of the foreign chemical plants was adopted as a part of a scheme for relieving famine that has led the Army to reopen 16 large domestic ordnance plants to manufacture fertilizer.

Plan Anticipated Move

The Army had adopted and put into operation the plan for opening the enemy plants, even before President Truman's Famine Emergency Committee urged such action at its last meeting June 21.

A report on the production of fertilizer in former enemy war plants was made this week by Col. J. R. Gilchrist, chief of the Civil Affairs Division of the Army.

"The plan for reparations and the level of postwar German economy provides that all industrial capital equipment for the production of synthetic ammonia be eliminated," he reported.

"In order to obtain the required quantities of fertilizer for agriculture, however, the existing capacity for the production of nitrogen by the synthetic ammonia process will be retained until the necessary imports of nitrogen are available and can be paid for," he stated.

Capacity Cut Down

The reparations plan for the German chemical industry will trim down the German capacity by more than half, Gilchrist adds.

"In the basic chemical industries there will be retained 40 per cent of the 1946 capacity of the basic fertilizer chemicals: Nitrogen, phosphat ,calcium carbide, sulphuric acid, alkalis and chlorine," he says.

"There is no restriction on production of potash. It is estimated that such production wil exceed the 1936 level and provide a substantial exportable surplus."

In Japan, Colonel Gilehrist says, the "interim reparations removal program provides that all that nation's capacity" for chemical production above a limited amount, shall be removed for reparations.

The limitations on Japanese annual chemical production are: sulphuric acid, 3½ tons; chlorine and caustic soda in electrolytic plants, 75 thousand tons; caustic soda 32,500 tons; and soda ash 630,000 tons.

Some Plants Exempted

However, plants engaged in fertilizer manufacture will be excepted for the time being.

The results of the Army's efforts to increase fertilizer production in the occupied territories, are increases as follows:

In Japan an estimated 925,000 tons in 1946, with a target of 1,300,000 tons next year. In 1945 the total production was 335,000 tons.

In the United States zone in Germany peacetime production was 53,000 tons. By a program of rebuilding plants damaged by war, the Army hopes to get to a production of 45,000 tons this year and next.

The fulfillment of the plans, Colonel Gilchrist states, depends upon the "repair and conversion of existing facilities, and upon the availability of coal."

Present estimates indicate, he adds, that 40 per cent of the nitrates and 35 per cent of the phosphates needed for fertilizer in the U. S. zone in Germany will be produced there; while in Japan 68 per cent of the nitrates and 2 per cent of the needed potassic fertilizers will be produced locally.

One big problem facing the Army is providing enough fertilizer for the American zone in Korea. There only 6 per cent of the nitrates, 9 per cent of the phosphates and none of the potassic fertilizers will be produced. The great reason for this is that the bulk of the Korean fertilizer production is in North Korea, occupied by the Russians.

The alleged pickup man, James J. Darr, 28, of 4048 Elie pl. se., was arrested when he drove up and parked his car. Captain Pearce said the floor of the automobile was littered with numbers slips and money.

Two men who approached the pickup car, Chatte Brown, 48, of 510 1st st. nw., and Willie Givens, 37, of 45 D st. nw., were also seized. They were charged only with disorderly conduct.

The two women and Darr were booked on charges of possessing lottery slips. Each was released in $50 bond pending arraignment in Municipal Court today.

Revolver Confiscated

A half hour earlier, Captain Pearce and his men arrested one man and two women and confiscated numbers slips and a .38 caliber Colt revolver at 415 H st. nw.

The women were booked for investigation. The man, Manselle Settles, 49, of the H st. address, was charged with disorderly conduct. Captain Pearce said the gun had been turned over to police ballistics experts for study.

Corpl. J. L. Proctor made the ninth arrest himself. He picked up George Monezis, 42, of 724 3d st. nw., in a coffee shop at 601 G st. nw. Monezis was released in $50 bond for appearance in Municipal Court today after being charged with possession of lottery slips.

decided the garb was not in keeping with Senate dignity.

The school girls were asked to leave after, according to Capitol police, they had created considerable confusion on the Senate floor, interference with debate.

The rule was tested again this week when five Massachusetts girls —three in slacks, and two in shorts —sought admission. The pair in shorts were turned away, although the slacks-wearing misses were admitted.

Doxey is out of town, but Deputy Sergeant of Arms J. Mark Trice said the current situation is this:

"Rules on attire have been greatly relaxed since the days when men visitors were required to wear ties in order to get into the gallery. Mr. Doxey, however, feels that the Senate is a dignified place, and, when faced with the problem, decided that girls in very short shorts should not be admitted."

Roberts commented:

"I have never kept anybody out of the House gallery because of their clothes, and I don't intend to. If women wear shorts at home and on the streets, they can wear them here—provided they do not parade or act indecent about it."

Brig. Gen. Thomas S. Hammond (right), wartime chief of the Chicago ordnance district, testifies before the Senate War Investigating Committee yesterday as his former executive officer, Col. John Slezak, listens during the probe of Illinois munitions firms which won more than 78 million dollars in war contracts

sider the case on its merits was "just window dressing."

"That's what I suspect very much," said Slozak.

Later Slozak told Pettit that Dr. Henry M. Garsson, president of Batavia Metals Products, had boasted that he did not have to deal with local officials but deal "directly with the Undersecretary."

Drew Huge Salaries

Garson and his brother, Murray W. Garson, former Assistant Secretary of Labor, drew huge salaries from the "paper empire" of corportions. Murry Garson, whose attorney described him as ill in Cuba yesterday, has been named by the FBI as a former associate of gangsters Dutch Schultz and Owney Madden.

Slozak observed that it seemed to him that the Undersecretary (Patterson) "is very well covered" by the memorandum he wrote, but, Slozak added:

"He (Patterson) put the rest of us in the soup because no matter what we do it is wrong."

Told to Ignore Friction

He later explained that the (Patterson) memorandum made it appear that the award was to be given fairly, although in fact officers were directed to ignore any friction with other agencies.

One of the most important criteria for getting the "E" award was cooperation with Government agencies, Slezak explained, and the lack of cooperation on the part of the Garssons with the War Manpower Commission was notorious.

In a conversation with other War Department officers on or about this time, Patterson said bluntly he had no use for the War Manpower Commission anyway, yesterday's testimony recorded.

Emphasizing the importance of tthe Patterson memorandum again and again, Pettit told Slezak:

"Let me add this, in talking with Herb White (Colonel in Ordnance) about thi sthing, Herb thought it wouldn't be wise to do less than we did last time.

"He thought what we did last time was perfectly okay.(Prepare the nomination but strike out the section recommending the nomination be given.)

"He doesn't want the chairman of the Military Affairs Committee to have somebody pass the buck back to Ordnance—that the reason they didn't get this thing was because of Ordnance."

Left Up to Award Board

It was finally agreed that this procedure would be followed and it would be left up to the award board to decide what to do with the nomination lacking any recommendation by Ordnance.

Slezak and his predecessor as chief of the Chicago Ordnance Department, Brig. Gen. T. S. Hammond, both testified they were invited to attend the "E" award dinner but declined.

With a grim smile, Slezak said he had assigned some of his junior officers "and they had to go."

What Government accountants described as only a partial list of expenses for the dinner, which Batavia tried to charge against its costs, was placed in the record.

Falsifying In Polish Vote 'Not Doubted'

London, July 5 (U.P.)—A foreign office spokesman said today that official quarters did not doubt that returns were falsified in the Polish referendum.

But he said the British government was not likely to take up the question with the Polish government.

He said the referendum was a purely internal affair, and the Poles had given the Allies no assurances about it. He pointed out earlier British complaints had not referred to the referendum ,but only to failure to fix a parliamentary election date and to grant freedom to all democratic parties.

The Daily Telegraph's Warsaw correspondent, Chirstopher Buckley, said in a delayed dispatch there were "serious irregularities" in Sunday's referendum and that they were on "a scale big enough to invalidate the figure which may be issued."

Buckley reported "several examples of allegedly fake counting from Poznan Province, the Warsaw suburb of Praga, the Pulawska area of south Warsaw and the Lubartow locality near Lublin."

He said that in Poznan, the answer to the first referendum question (whether Poland shall have a one-house parliament) was actually the reverse of an official return showing that 1156 Poles had voted "yes" and 144 had voted "no."

Tabulation in many instances did not take place in polling booths, he said, but at central district offices and in some cases at security police headquarters.

67 "Bandits" Killed

Warsaw, June 5 (AP).—A foreign ministry spokesman announced today that 67 "bandits" were killed and 308 wounded or arrested in clashes between security police, militia and outlawed bands before and during last Sunday's referendum. He said 65 members of the militia and police were also slain.

Early returns have given the government a substantial lead in the referendum. Vice Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, leader of the Polish Peasant Party opposition, has demanded a district-by-district recount.

The pogrom centered on the Jewish headquarters in downtown Kielce.

Seven more Jews were dragged from a train and beaten to death in the nearby village of Piekuzow by crowds which shouted "kill the Jews!"

Gen. Stanislaw Steds, who arrived here by plane from Warsaw to investigate said the pogrom was organized "by the same group from abroad which carried out a pogrom here before."

Instigator Identified

He said the man who proviked the pogrom had been identified definitely as a member of the original army of Gen. Wladislaw Anders, now commanding the Polish army in exile.

Eighty-four survivors of the Jewish colony seemed to share the sole though tonight, which was expressed by Anna Barenhole, 35. She told reporters through swollen lips:

Because of the heavy military obligations which could result, it was stated authoritatively that it was conceivable Britain might turn down the recommendation to open the gates of Palestine to 100,000 Jews unless assured United States aid in defense and security measures.

Woman Promising Kiss Cuts Husband's Throat

Warwick, England, July 5 (AP).—Mrs. Monica Appleby, 28, today admitted cutting her husband's throat while kissing him. She was sentenced to nine months imprisonment.

Justice Croom Johnson told her:

"Without any motive, after you had asked him in a most affectionate way to shut his eyes so that he might receive a surprise from you, you cut his throat with a razor."

Mrs. Appleby could not explain her action. Her convalescent husband, a former Congregational minister, said he had forgiven her.

Senate Authorizes 2 Billions For Waterways Improvements

By the Associated Press

Water projects to cost nearly two billion dollars were approved by the Senate today.

By voice votes, which are not recordede, the Senate passed first a billion-dollar rivers and harbors bill and then a flood control measure authorizing a similar expenditure.

The bills cover navigation, flood control, hydroelectric power and irrigation works throughout the country. Both go now to a conference committee for ironing out differences between Senate and House versions.

Neither bill makes an appropriation. Funds must be voted in subsequent legislation.

The rivers and harbors bill survived opposition led by Senator Robertson (R., Wyo.) who urged rejection pending a study of the porjects by the Interstate Commerce Commission. He was defeated by a roll call vote of 44 to 21 on an amendment to eliminate the propose $116,941,000 Tennessee-Tom Bigbee Waterway.

The proposed $71,000,000 Foster Creek Reservoir in Washington was added to the bill after it had been omitted by the Senate Commerce Committee.

The bill carries a $150,000,000 initial authorization for the $500,000,000 Arkansas River program.

The Senate added these projects to the flood control bill: Yadkinpee Dee River, N. C., $7,194,000; Carden's Bottom, Ark., $1,485,000; Polecat Creek, Okla., $1,838,000; Boise River, Idaho, $1,684,000; Queen Creek, Ariz., $1,645,000.

Both bills authorize long-range programs designed by the Army Engineers to assure orderly development of water resources and to create a backlog of public works for slack time jobs.

French Seat Reynaud Over Reds' Protests

Paris, July 5 (AP).—The Assembly, over Communist opposition, voted 298 to 132 today to seat prewar Premier Paul Reynaud.

A Communist-dominated election committee had recommended that Reynaud's seat be invalidated, not because of any irregularities in connection with his election, but because of the "moral aspect" in view of his wartime record.

"Doesn't he who selected (Marshal) Petain in 1940 as vice president . . . deserve a penalty? At least he shouldn't sit in the National Constituent Assembly," the committee's report said.

Reynaud defended himself before a largely sympathetic chamber, accusing the Communists of "wishing to make us turn away from our natural inclination toward the Ango-Saxon democracies toward totalitarianism."

The Assembly's constitutional committee, also over Communist objections, decided that Presidents of France in the Fourth Republic would be elected by at least two chambers.

A proposition to give the President of the Republic the right to dissolve the Chamber of Deputies failed of passage in a 21-21 tie vote.

OPA

ator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) objected to Porter testifying before the Appropriations Committee on OPA's $106,650,000 budget for the next fiscal year. Bridges argued OPA was legally dead and it was not in order to consider funds for a dead agency.

Two Reasons Given

The Senate's own delayed start on the one-year extension compromise was attributed by Barkley to (1) overnight delays in printing copies of the bill and report and (2) weekend absence of many Senators.

Late in the day, Barkley obtained permission to make the legislation unfinished business, serving notice that debate would start Monday. To clear the way, the Senate swiftly passed pending rivers and harbors and flood control legislation. Then it quit for the weekend.

Three Accused In Kidnaping Of Premier

Batavia, July 5 (AP).—Mohammed Natsir, information minister for the unrecognized Indonesian Republic, charged tonight that Communist Leader Tan Malaka and two others were the ringleaders in the recent kidnaping of Premier Sutan Sjahrir.

Natsir, in a broadcast from Jogjakarta, the republic's headquarters, said the other two were Soebardjo, former foreign minister, and Abikoesno, former communications minister, in the Indonesian cabinet.

Sjahrir, released last week, had charged that his kidnaping was engineered by "foolish lads instigated perhaps by political elements."

Soebardjo was charged with trying to overthrow Soekarno in an attempt to have the Indonesian question submitted to the United Nations.

Yesterday Soekarno told a meeting of Indonesian political and military leaders that he intended to retain his recently assumed dictatorial powers "until the cabinet can function again." He said the present cabinet had "lost its real character" and that he assumed a position of "dictatorship for the benefit of democracy."

Natsir said an intensive campaign was started, which accused Sjahrir of "selling" Indonesia to the Dutch.

sociation of New York, said best grade eggs cost retailers about 55 or 56 cents a dozen and sold to consumers at from 63 to 65 cents. He added:

"This isn't much of a rise above OPA ceilings, which would be about 60 cents right now."

Describing the meat situation, C. F. House, market news analyst for the U. S. Department of Agriculture in New York, said some dealers had advanced prices $5 to $10 per hundred pounds because of the elimination of subsidies.

He said those prices still were about 25 cents a pound below former black market prices.

Meanwhile, in Chicago the American Meat Institute said "better meat supplies for consumers are building up," pointing to large cattle and hog receipts at leading livestock markets.

The heaviest Chicago hog receipts in six months yesterday sent prices down as much as $1.25 a hundredweight from Wednesday's level. Cattle and sheep, however, remained generally steady at the recent peak prices.

Millers in New York reported that the small flurry of business which took place earlier in the week had ended, due in part to fears of a rollback in prices.

A substantial reduction in buying interest in the Chicago grain market resulted in oats futures being off more than 2 cents at times yesterda.

In New York, cotton futures moved over a fairly wide range in quiet dealings, curtailed by holiday influences.

Fifty-two Phoenix members of the Arizona Restaurant Association agreed to raise prices on meat items 20 to 33 1-3 per cent and milk from 5 to 10 cents a glass in Phoenix restaurants.

Mortar Bombs Seized In Jewish Area

Jerusalem, July 5 (AP).—British military authorities pressing their hunt through the tense Holy Land for illegal arms said today they had seized 667 German mortar bombs and a large amount of British battle dress hidden in a bull's stall at Mesheq Yagur, Jewish settlement near Haifa.

(In London a dispatch from Jerusalem said British soldiers had been alerted for possible retaliatory measures by three Jewish underground organizations.

Dr. Isaac Herzog, chief rabbi of Palestine, told newsmen after an hour's conference with Prime Minister Attlee that he received the impression the Palestine situation, "critical as it is, is not beyond remedy.")

The British said a week of searching at Mesheq Yagur had produced the greatest dump of hidden arms found in Palestine. Twenty large caches had been discovered up to last night.

Meanwhile a high British officer quoted from a statement by Lieut. Gen. Sir Allan Cunningham, the Palestine High Commissioner, asserting the need for "proper control" of defenses of either the Arabs or Jews.

"I don't believe any of us like to see the Jews stripped of those things they have so prodigiously been gathering at such great cost . . . but the thing we object to is the presence of demolition materials."

Rush of New Voters Seen In Va. Today

New voters in Virginia were expected to swamp local registrars in order to beat the deadline today to become eligible to vote in the premaries only a month away.

Precinct and central registrars in Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax announced they would remain open all day, from sunrise to sunset as required by State law.

Registration has been heavy to date and registrars in nearby Virginia expect to do a rushing business today because of two factors:

Two Factors Cited

1. A recent ruling by the Civil Service Commission that permits a Government employe to claim his state of origin for apportionment purposes even though he lives and votes in Virginia or Maryland.

2. Return of thousands of veterans who were discharged after January 1, 1945 and are not required to pay a poll tax.

Numerous complaints have been received from citizens who have experienced difficulty in registering. As a result, the Arlington-Alexandria League of Women Voters has announced it will act as a "clearing house" for such citizens.

Said Mrs. C. T. Larson, voters' service chairman of the League, "We have had many rumors and have had several specific cases reported to us involving the difficulties citizens have in registering.

To Examine Cases

"We want to study all such instances in order to take the matter up with election officials so that remedial action can be taken if needed," she said.

Meanwhile, political axes were being ground throughout the State as interest was stimulated in the primaries which include a Senatorial contest between Senator Harry F. Byrd and Martin A. Hutchinson, Richmond lawyer, as well as contests in five of the State's nine Congressional districts for nominations to the House of Representatives.

Speaking at an American Legion rally at Charlotte Courthouse, Hutchinson said "Virginians must declare their independence from the senior Senator."

Charges Ridiculed

Hutchinson ridiculed Senator Byrd's attacks on Sidney Hillman, Political Action Committee chairman, charging they were "a desperate search for a scapegoat."

In Arlington, John Locke Greenarch political opponent of Senator Byrd was preparing a radio address which, he said will be directed at Senator Byrd.

In Richmond, General Registrar Vernon N. Davis reported three-fourths of his registrants are former servicemen.

Following the end of registration today, books will be closed for 30 days. They will also be closed 30 days prior to the November general election.

123,422 Get Job Despite Handicaps

Useful jobs for 123,422 handicapped men and women are the fruits of three years operation under the expanded Federal-State rehabilitation act, the Office of Vocational rehabilitation announced yesterday.

Average cost of rehabilitating a physically or mentally handicapped person was $300, a one-time expense which Director Michael J. Shortley said was "the more impressive" because it contrasts with $300 to $500 a year to maintaining such a person in dependency.

The men and women rehabilitated into jobs last year had previously received 12 million dollars a year from odd jobs, relatives or public support, Shortley said. After rehabilitation they earned at a 73 million dollars rate with an average of $1764.

"More people should know about this service," Shortley said in a statement. "There are at least 1,500,000 civilian men and women of working age with physical or mental handicaps who could be helped through vocational rehabilitation."

The three-year-old act, "Public Law 113," extended the vocational services to the mendtally as well as the physically handicappel and authorized medical, surgical and psychiatric treatment.

be one or two bridges had now been settled.

Danger of Fund Lapse

Commissioner Guy Mason told the committee that early action was necessary on the bridge bill. Without speed, he said, there was danger that Federal road funds for the structure would lapse. Mason estimated that the bridge would cost from seven to nine million dollars. The lower sum is authorized in the bill.

Senator McCarran urged and won approval for the bill to make Saturdays a legal holiday for the Recorder of Deeds. He pointed out that Congress this week approved a five-day week for Washington financial institutions, and that the Recorder's office is now the only District agency required to stay open on Saturdays.

Senator Hoey said the three bills would be presented for action of the Senate within the next few days.

House District Chairman McMillan (D., S. C.) said it was unlikely that the teacher's pay bill would receive attention from his committee when it meets Monday. He pointed out that the measure would first have to clear through the District subcommittee headed by Representative Feighan (D., Ohio).

U. S. to Give Korea Democratic Regime

Plan Will Be Tried With or Without Soviet Cooperation

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Staff Writer

The United States Government has decided to try to make democracy work in as much of Korea as possible, with or without the cooperation of Russia, diplomatic officials said yesterday.

The Soviet Union was reported by these informants to have ignored two appeals for cooperation in political preparations designed to restore Korean independence. So the American military government in the country, to which the Allied powers long ago promised independence, is going ahead on its own.

Russia occupies the northern section of Korea and the United States the southern part. The situation is not unlike that in Germany in that each occupying power is exclusively responsible for what happens in its zone.

Joint Commission Set Up

Months ago a joint Soviet-American commission was set up to begin working on the political reconstruction of Korea which, after 40 years of Japanese rule, may require considerable assistance before it is again ready to govern itself.

The United States proposed that the commission hear Koreans critical of occupation policies, including Russian policies, as well as those who were not critical. The Russians were reported to have objected. Officials said it was the old Soviet-American fight over free speech which has come up in the United Nations in other forms. It split the commission and finally resulted in discontinuing its work.

Still insisting on the free speech right for Korean nationals before the commission, the United States has sent two appeals to Russia suggesting that the commission resume work. Informants here said these have both been ignored.

"Practice" Political Machinery

As a result Maj. Gen. Archer Lerch, military government chief, has been authorized to go ahead with the creation of "practice" machinery for political activities in Korea. The main cog in this machinery is an advisory legislative council. The members of this are to be elected by the people in the American zone and the council, once constituted, may enact laws which can become effective provided the military government accepts them.

Meanwhile, the United States was represented as standing ready at any time to resume cooperation with the Russians in trying to work out the destiny of Korea as a whole. Washington is committed to the principle of unified as well as independent Korea and the present state of affairs is greatly disliked by top officials here.

Some are hopeful that the improved U. S.-Soviet relations which may result from the Foreign Ministers conference at Paris may incidentally ease problems of the two powers in the Far East, including Korea.

Youth Program

Reds to Call 425,000 for Job Training

Moscow, July 5 (U.P.).—Minister of Labor Reserves Vassili Pronin has announced that 425,000 boys and girls will be called for industrial and railroad training between July 10 and August 10 as part of the five-year-plan, the newspaper Pravda reported today.

Under the current five-year-plan, 1,200,000 youngsters are being called each year for training in special schools, Pronin said. He disclosed that 240,000 boys and girls have just graduated and gone to work and another 140,000 will graduate before the end of July.

"In the course of the five-year-plan it is planned to increase the number of workers and employes of the Soviet Union to 33,500,000," Pronin said. "Of more than seven million workers required by industry and transport, 4,500,000 will be trained in the state labor reserves."

Pronin said the state will spend 27 billion roubles (about $2,250,000,000) to train new labor reserves under the present five-year-plan compared with 12 billion roubles (about one billion dollars) in the past five years.

Boys and girls trained in industrial schools are learning 180 different trades, he said. Special schools in industrial arts and navigation have been opened.

The State provides pupils with clothing, food and textbooks. The boys and girls wear gray and black uniforms with the insignia of their branch of service.

The students are called up at the age of 14 and study for two years. Boys and girls from rural districts attending schools in cities live in dormitories, while urban pupils may live at home.

The country districts are a great reservoir of boys and girls called up for training. Thus the Government can increase the urban industrial population at a steady and carefeully regulated rhythm which fits in with the needs of the five-year plan.

Teen-Agers' Vote Favored By Democrats

By the Associated Press

A party poll on whether the voting age should be reduced from 21 to 18 has ended with a four-to-one ballot in favor of the change, the Democratic Party's official newspaper said yesterday.

[In a Post poll published last June 24, it was shown 52 per cent of the persons questioned in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia are oppose dto lowering the voting age to 18. In favor are 41 per cent, with 7 per cent undecided.—Editor's note.]

Georgia and South Carolina are now the only States permitting 18, 19, and 20-year-olds to vote. By State law, 'teen-agers will vote in the July 17 Democratic primary in Georgia. In South Carolina, a new party rule permits participation in the Democratic primary August 13 of white Democrats over 18.

The partty organ, "The Democrat" said response to the poll of its readers was "most gratifying." The total of those voting was not given.

"The reason most often given in favor of lowering the voting age," the paper added, "was that if the 18-year-olds were olds were old enough to fight for their country, they are old enough to have the ballot.

"On the other side, those who felt the voting age limits should stay where it is stated that they felt that he 18, 19 and 20-year-olds were oo immature, too inexperienced, and could be too easily led by persuasion."

The paper said a quick look at the ballots of those under 21 "dispel" the latter idea and showed the reasons given were "well thought out."

The Gallup Poll

Public Views Divided on How To Handle U. S. Communist

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., July 5.—The American public has mixed views on the question of whether anything should be done about communists in this country, with a substantial number of voters reserving judgment. But the general weight of opinion is toward adopting strong measures to curb or regulate communists and Communist Party activity. Communist parties were a strong factor in a number of recent elections in Europe, notably in France and Czechslovakia. In the United States the party has never polled much in the way of votes, being one of the very minor parties in terms of numerical strength. But the average American, perhaps with an eye on the development of communism abroad, does not feel very tolerant at this time toward American communists, as the following poll results by the Institute show:

What do you think should be done about the communists in this country?

The vote:

Take strong measures (get rid of them, report them, jail them, shoot them)
Curb them (keep them out of office, make it hard for them to be active)
Let them rave, but watch them	7
Do nothing	16
No opinion	25

Previous studies have indicated that American voters object to the Communist Party on the grounds that it receives orders from a foreign country—is not, in other words, a purely native and American-controlled political party.

The group in which antagonism toward American communists is most prevalent is the farmers of the country, while the business and professional and white collar classes express somewhat less hostility than other groups.

The vote by occupation groups:

	Bus. and Prof.	White Collar	Manual Workers	Farmers
Strong measures	38%	34%	37%	40%
Curb them	18	15	14	21
Let them rave	10	8	5	9
Do nothing	20	21	14	4
No opinion	16	22	30	26

Soviet Charges U. S. Hampers China Growth

Moscow, July 5 (AP).—Three Russian newspapers assailed American actions in China today, declaring that U. S. capital was helping to push China backward into the position of a semicolonial country and that Americans were politically supporting reactionary forces.

A Pravda dispatch, meanwhile, accused George Allen, U. S. Ambassador to Iran, with making false charges against Russia. It said Alen declared Russia had evacuated Iran only upon American insistence, and that Russia was trying to obtain a Persian Gulf port.

An Izvestia article by V. Yarolvol charged American capitalists were flooding China with "cheap merican goods" and wrecking efforts of Chinese textile manufacturers to resume business.

A Pravda commentator, V. Avarin, said that "without the support of Americans, the reactionary forces of China would have been routed long ago. "As many times reported already in the American press, the Americans are transferring on their ships troops for strife against the people's armies, and they give these troops armaments and give political support to reactionary forces," he said.

N. Y. Democrat Chieftain Dies In Brooklyn

New York, July 5 (U.P.).—Frank V. Kelly, Brooklyn Democratic chieftain, died today after a month's illness. He was 67, and had been hospitalized since June 8.

Kelly succeeded John H. McGoohey as Kings County Democratic leader. He was a close friend of the late President Roosevelt and headed an organization which piled up large Democratic majorities in all elections.

Kelly was one of the Nation's most colorful and powerful political leaders, ranking with Frank Hague of Jersey City, Edward Kelly of Chicago, and Ed Flynn of New York's Bronx.

His first venture in politics was in 1907 in a Tammany Hall invasion of Brooklyn. Kelly and several others opposed their then district leader William C. Melody, who supported the Tammany invasion, and defeated him soundly.

Kelly served as public administrator of Kings (Brooklyn) County for more than 25 years before taking over leadership of the party in Brooklyn.

It was Kelly who was directly responsible for the rise of William O'Dwyer to mayor of New York. In 1939, Kelly withdrew his support of District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan and gave it to O'Dwyer who later as district attorney gained city and national prominence in Prosecuting Murder, Inc.

Kelly made Brooklyn a stronghold for the Roosevelt administration. Only once in their years of association was he at odds with the late President.

In 1942, he had promised James A. Farley he would support John J. Bennett, jr., for the party nomination for governor. When Roosevelt threw his support behind Senator James Mead, Kelly refused to budge from his promise to Farley.

Kelly was a bachelor, a native of Brooklyn.

Was It Involved?

Wells Links Royal Family To Mosley

London, July 5 (AP).—H. G. Wells, in an almost unprecedented attack upon the royal family, asked publicly today whether it was involved in the "huge" sums which, Commons was told recently, Mussolini paid to Sir Oswald Mosley, British Fascist leader, before the war.

The 79-year-old novelist and historian declared in an article in the magazine Socialist Leader that if the royal family were involved, "then there is every reason why the House of Hanover should follow the House of Savoy into the shadows of exile and leave England free to return to its old and persistent republican traditions."

Buckingham Palace could not be reached for comment.

The Socialist Leader is published weekly by the Independent Labor Party, left-wing offshoot of the Labor Party.

Wells said of the British royal family:

"Even this German-ruled . . . monarchy which links the English with the crumbling monarchist system of the world is menaced by a gathering accumulation of revelations. Things are coming out and they are bound to come out.

"Sane and Patriotic Thing"

"Why cannot these tainted people do the sane and patriotic thing while they may still be treated with consideration?

"Now they can be bought out and set apart with the dignity and honors they value. Later on, their dismissal may have to be ruder."

Suggesting that a "royal reserve" for exiled kings and queens be created "in America or elsewhere, where people appear to be hungry for uniforms and titles," Wells said:

"The genuine democratic communities throughout the world need to know what is going on in this hushed-up business of the huge Mosley funds and how far our own royal family is involved in this affair."

Home Secretary Ede on June 6 read in Commons two letters from Count Dino Grandi, former Italian Ambassador to Britain, to Mussolini, mentioning payments of $240,000 a year by the Italian government to Mosley in the 1930's.

Mosley, jailed by the British during the war, denied receiving funds from Italy.

There was no suggestion in Ede's spoeech the royal family was in any way connected with the reported payments.

OPA and Paris News Pleases President

By Ernest B. Vaccaro

Thurmont, Md., July 5 (AP).—President Truman, taking a holiday at his Catoctin Mountain Shangri-La, had a transatlanitc telephone chat today with Secretary of State Byrnes, attending the four-power Conference in Paris.

Lieut. Comdr. William Rigdon told reporters that Mr. Truman was pleased at the agreement of the Foreign Ministers sto hold a general peace conference i Paris July 29. Rigdon, officer in charge of the mountain retreat, came down to tell newsmen of the President's reaction.

Rigdon said the President also was pleased with published reports indicating that Majority Leader Barkley had worked out a satisfactory compromise on OPA.

Compromise Bombarded

(In Washington, however, the compromise was bombarded with criticism from several directions. OPA Administrator Paul Porter called for elimination of "undesirable" features, while foes of OPA demanded extensive revision, or outright defeat of any extension bill. Barkley put off Senate action until Monday.)

The President's conversation with Byrnes took place at 9 a. m., Eastern standard time, an hour and a half after the President arose to begin another day of his long Fourth of July weekend rest with Mrs. Truman.

To Visit Gettysburg

Later the President and Mrs. Truman drove through Hagerstown, Waynesboro and other towns. They plan a visit tomorrow morning to the Gettysburg Battlefield in nearby Pennsylvania.

Rigdon said the President would meet Washington reporters on the battleground near where Pickett made his famous charge.

There was no indication whether the President knew about a statement in Washington by OPA Administrator Paul Porter saying that the compromise Senate Banking Committee measure still contained some of the "undesirable features" of the OPA bill the President vetoed as "inflationary." Porter called for a bill more in line with presidential recommendations.

Take Mile Walk

After his talk with Byrnes, the Chief Executive left Mrs. Truman and took a mile walk along mountain trails to a point near a so-called "haunted house." The story goes, Rigdon said, that a murder occurred there may years ago and the natives gave it that name.

After lunch and a nap, the President took another walk and a dip in the mountain pool 200 yards from the main lodge. He arranged to attend a showing tonight of "Night in Casablanca," featuring the Marx Brothers. He and Mrs. Truman viewed "Anna and the King of Siam" last night, retiring at 11 o'clock.

Aussie War Surplus Executive Holds U. S. Headed for Disaster

Melbourne, Australia, July 5 (U.P.). Horace F. Richardson, deputy chairman of the Australian War Surplus Disposal Commission, said today that a visit to Washington had convinced him the United States is rushing blindly toward economic disaster.

"For all our criticism of our politicians, they are comparatively well-informed and diligent compared to the swarm of racketeers, ignoramuses, and stooges for big pressure groups in Congress who are strangling America's attempts to regain postwar stability," he said.

He was particularly surprised at the abolition of price controls, which he said he had never expected in his "wildest dreams." He was amazed at the mad pursuit of the dollar, which he said was luring the wealthiest American businessmen to their own destruction.

As regards the American war property disposal program, Richardson said it had reached a state of chaos. The men in charge of it, he said, spent their time before congressional committees investigating rackets and injustices.

Budget Bureau Held Reversed On Army Bill

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

President Truman reversed a decision of the Budget Bureau y approving retirement pay for inactive serve of part-time members of the Army, a Senate Military Subcommittee was told yesterday.

Brig. Gen. E. A. Evans, executive secretary of the Reserve Officers Association, said he was told by Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughn, White House aide, that the President was in accord with such payments. He said he called Vaughn after the Budget Bureau advised him that payments for inactive service "would not be in accord with the program of the President."

Senator Maybank (D., S. C.) author of a bill for retiring members of reserve components, said the white House had called him to notify him of Mr. Truman's approval of such a provision.

Army Representatives Heard

The subcommittee heard representatives of the Regular Army, National Guard and Reserves, and of veterans organizations join in support of the bill's provisions for retiring part-time officers and men. Under the measure, Reserve and National Guard officers and men must serve at least 20 years, of which a minimum of three years must be on active duty.

Payment, which would be deferred until the individual has reached 60, would be at the rate of 2½ per cent of pey multiplied by the numbeer of years on active duty. In addition, ½ of 1 per cent would be paid for each year on inactive status.

The measure provides that individuals, in order to be eligible for retirement, must meet standards prescribed by the Secretary of War. It provides also for elimination of part-time personnel who do not meet prescribed standards during service.

To Cost $1,800,000 Yearly

Cost of the measure was estimated at $1,800,000 a year at the outset, with a gradual increase as personnel from World War II became eligible for retirement. A decrease in cost was seen after 15 or 20 years.

Brig. Gen. Ira P. Swift, assistant chief of personnel of the Army, testified that the bill would provide an incentive for officers and men of the reserve components to remain in the Army. Without it, he said, the Army "most certainly will lose many of the best National Guard and reserve officers trained during the war."

Brig. Gen. Ellard A. Walsh of Minnesota, president of the National Guard Association, pointed out that the measure would tend to keep not only officers but enlisted men in the Guard and Reserve. In reply to a question by Maybank, he said that "nearly 100 per cent" of National Guard officers were promoted from the ranks. Such procedure, he said, is "almost an unwritten law" of the National Guard.

Act Passed in 1920

The Army reorganization act of 1920, Walsh said, was enacted when the shortcomings of the military system in World War I were apparent and provided "a sound and effective military policy."

"But we failed to implement it for reasons of economy," he said, "and that brought us to the brink of disaster at the beginning of this war."

Walsh said that to meet the higher standards now in effect, the Guard and Reserve officer would have to devote much more time than formerly to his part-time military duties. The bill's retirement provisions, he said, would offer an incentive and a reward for this additional time and effort.

Maj. Gen. Hilton A. Reckord, adjutant general of Maryland, who said he spoke also for the American Legion, asked that provisions be made for a "few older officers" who served in World War I but were too old for the second war.

Others speaking for the bill were Bert H. White, of the Military Order of the World Wars and H. S. Garber, secretary to Representative Ellsworth (R., Ore.).

Garber urged amendments to insure that officers would not be penalized for conterting forced retirement by being retired at a lower grade than if they had retired voluntarily.

Court Is Told Kilian Ordered Soldier Beaten

Bad Nauheim, Germany, July 5. A prosecution witness testified today that Col. James A. Kilian, former commandant of the Lichfield, England, Detention Camp, personally had ordered the beating of a soldier prisoner there, and had promoted two guards for shooting at prisoners.

The witness, Lieut. Granville Cubage of Oklahoma City, said he once asked relief from duty at Lichfield because "the place was too rough and tough and I didn't want to get hung out on a limb."

Cubage recently was fined $250 on a charge of authorizing use of clubs at Lichfield.

Kilian alternately reddened, fidgeted, smiled and shook his head in denial as he listened to Cubage.

Tells of Promotions

Cubage said two guards had been promoted by Kilian—one for shooting a prisoner in the leg in a reported attempted escape and another for shooting through a window near the head of a soldier who was looking out in violation of guardhouse rules.

"That's the kind of man I want—he's carrying out instructions," Cubage quoted Kilian as saying.

He said Kilian once told him to take an incorrigible prisoner "down to the rifle range and work him over—just don't break too many bones." Cubage said he told another officer about this, and that officer replied: "That's not so good. We must be careful. He's likely to leave us out on a limb."

Then, he continued, they submitted the prisoner to medical examination and found he was insane.

Ennis Enters Denial

The defendant in a concurrent trial, Lieut. Leonard Ennis of Peekskill, N. Y., denied that he "ever instituted any system of treatment of prisoners contrary to law or any system of unauthorized, cruel, or unusual punishment of soldiers" at Lichfield.

Ennis said he had spent only 14 days on actual duty at the guardhouse.

He said the prisoners liked to cause trouble because "they felt it would insure their keeping away from combat," and said he had tried to appear "determined and fearless" before the men. He added: "I did urge the guards to be tough," but denied ordering any guard "to lay violent hands upon a prisoner."

Italian Reparations

In his radio address of May 20, following the first Paris conference of the Council of Foreign Ministers, Secretary Byrnes made a powerful case in opposition to Russia's demand for reparations from Italy. He pointed out that to enable the Italian nation to live we have already made direct and indirect advances of 900 million dollars to that country. For Italy to pay reparations out of current production, as Russia had demanded, instead of out of available assets—such as her shipping—would in the long run, Mr. Byrnes said, only place an additional burden on us. But on this point as on so many others that for weeks deadlocked the Council of Foreign Ministers, Russia has won out.

She did not get the whole reparations loaf she has been clamoring for. But she is to get a good deal more than half. Italy is to pay the Soviet Union reparations totaling one hundred million dollars over a period of seven years with the major part of these reparations coming out of Italy's current production. The only real concession made by Russia in this matter was to agree that payments out of current production are not to begin for a period of two years. In the meantime, the Council postponed for consideration by the 21-power peace conference the claims that may be advanced against Italy by Greece, Yugoslavia, Albania and Ethiopia. Since those nations suffered far more from the direct Italian war effort than did Russia, their claims will have to be considered, although that will again mean adding additional burdens on Italy's prostrate economy. The concessions made to Russia regarding Italian reparations may be justified on the ground that without it the Paris conference could not have completed its labors. But it sets a very bad precedent.

Housing They Can Rent

Danger that many thousands of local veterans will be left without housing is growing with every day of procrastination on the urban redevelopment bill for the District. When this bill was laid on the shelf some weeks ago to await the return of Representative McGehee, solemn asurances were given that it would be ready for a vote in the House on District Day, July 8. To put the bill in final shape a meeting of the House District Committee was called for today. But now that meeting has been postponed until Monday, and, with several controversies remaining to be worked out, the hope of getting final action on the measure has been notably dimmed.

This shabby treatment of the District would be bad enough if it were merely a question of getting the city's long delayed slum-clearance program into action again. But more than that is at stake. The Nation has accepted a clear obligation to see that housing is built for its defenders returning to civilian life. Obviously this does not mean just any sort of housing. It means dwellings that veterans can afford to rent or buy. A survey by the planning subcommittee of the District Emergency Housing Committee shows that 61 per cent of the veterans seeking apartments or houses here can afford to pay a purchase price of $6000 or less and rentals of $50 a month or less. The subcommittee naturally drew the conclusion that 19,680 of the 32,000 dwelling units so urgently needed in Washington should be in these low-price and low-rental fields.

The conclusion that must be drawn from this report is unmistakable. Private enterprise cannot build homes for a large number of veterans whose need for housing is the most desperate. Without a substantial program of public housing, therefore, our policy on veterans' housing would be semifarcical. It would deny aid to the group most in need of governmental help. How, then, could any thoughtful member of Congress fail to lend his support to enactment of this special bill for the District and the similar Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill for the country as a whole?

If the local measure is to serve its purpose, however, two crippling amendments proposed while it was in Mr. McGehee's subcommittee will have to be defeated. One of these would reduce from three years to one the period in which the National Capital Housing Authority could acquire sites for public low-rent housing. Obviously the proposed new machinery for condemnation and clearance of slum sites could not begin to function in 12 months. Common sense suggests that the NCHA should have ample leeway in purchasing land until the new agency can get into full operation.

The second crippling amendment would impose a confusing and unreasonable definition on public housing. Instead of permitting public housing to occupy the field which private enterprise cannot reach, it would confine it to the lowest one fifth of the population in the income scale. The result would be to leave a vast number of families in a sort of twilight zone in which no housing of any sort would be built. This would be so grossly unfair that we can scarcely imagine the House approving it. Yet these amendments may cause serious trouble unless the District Committee has the foresight to strike them out before the bill goes to the floor.

Last Chance For OPA

Senate proponents of the Taft and Wherry amendments to the vetoed price-control extension bill are simply wasting time trying to reincorporate them in the pending measure. For the President has made it clear beyond the shadow of a doubt that he prefers to get along without any system of price control rather than one based upon the pricing formulas embodied in the Taft and companion amendments. Consequently, any Senator voting for restitution of these amendments in place of the compromise proposal approved by the Banking and Currency Committee is really voting for the permanent interment of OPA.

In our opinion, the compromise proposal now before the Senate meets the major objections of the President to the rejected pricing formulas. It would give the price administrator the discretionary leeway that he must have in making ceiling price adjustments. It would be less inflationary than the Taft amendment because of the change in the base period and in the method of computing maximum prices. Moreover, it does not guarantee that maximum prices shall cover the costs of every member of the group involved. Under the Taft amendment, every individual seller would have been permitted to apply his own base-period price for a controlled product and to add to it a sum representing the weighted average industry increase in the total cost of the product since the base period. OPA could no longer have set uniform dollar-and-cents ceiling prices for any product for which manufacturers were charging different prices in the base period.

Another feature of the substitute amendment differentiating it sharply from the Taft amendment is that it would not force the OPA to raise the ceiling price of a product (provided the price equaled average current costs), if it appeared that such an increase would not result in an expansion of output, or would be practicable only by reducing the production of equally needed items. Thus room is left for price increases required to stimulate production without compelling OPA to grant increases that would either have no effect, or a positively harmful effect, on production.

Although the bill now before the Senate is in many respects defective, it would make it possible for OPA to maintain workable controls over essential commodities and rents during the critical period immediately ahead. At this juncture it would be worse than a waste of time to debate the issue raised by abolition of OPA's controversial maximum average price order, applicable to clothing manufacturers, or the limitations put on the amount of subsidies to be paid. Most of the changes, excepting the Taft and companion amendments, would, we believe, fit into the general program that the President outlined in his veto message. Since that message dealt chiefly with the Taft and the related Wherry and Crawford amendments, it seems fair to conclude that other sections of the revamped bill are not unacceptable.

Speedy congressional action on the pending measure is required to prevent rising prices from getting out of hand. Price increases may be rolled back without great hardship if the interval between rise and fall is brief. But the longer action on price-control legislation is delayed, the harder it will be to retrace our steps without doing grave injustice to both producers and consumers and creating more ill will for the OPA.

There are optimists who harbor hopes that inflated prices will bring in their wake an outpouring of goods that will provide a sure remedy for the inflation we now fear. That may be true in some cases, but in many lines of production shortages exist that only time can make good. Automobiles and houses, for example, will be in short supply for a long time to come, regardless of the stimulus to output from price increases. Moreover, if price increases were to become general instead of being confined to hardship cases, as would be the case under the Taft formula, the stimulus provided by higher sales prices would speedily be offset by higher production costs and increased consumer resistance. Then where should we be?

Labor Peace Formula

Although several feeble attempts are now pending, no real efforts have yet been made by Congress to initiate the long-range study of an improved labor relations program, as recommended by President Truman. The sole contributions to labor legislation during this critical session of Congress, aside from the vetoed Case bill, are the Hobbs antiracketeering bill now before the President and the unfortunate anti-Petrillo Act. It would be indeed regrettable if Congress should recess without at least setting the wheels in motion for a constructive examination of our labor ills. With the untold pressures loosed by the lapse of OPA, we are likely to be in drastic need of some better formulas for solving labor-management impasses.

Such a study as the President has recommended need not and should not be a field day for antilabor forces to get in their licks. Its prime purpose should be to inquire into improved methods of maintaining industrial peace by eliminating abuses and providing smoother working machinery for settling disputes. The proposed joint committee should have no mandate to attack labor's genuine gains, but it should concern itself with making collective bargaining a two-way affair through revision of the Wagner Act to make such bargaining equally incumbent on labor as it now is on management. The study could well probe the question of labor's rights and how they affect those of the people as a whole in public utility controversies. It should consider how to bring about more effective mediation and fact-finding. It ought also to go over the desirability of public accounting by unions in the same way that corporations are now required to make their figures public.

It would be foolish for Congress to shy away from this study because of fear of arousing opposition during this election year. Intelligent labor leaders are aware of the need for curbing abuses if labor's status is to be maintained, just as abuses by employers have been corrected in the past. A carefully planned, comprehensive diagnosis of the shortcomings in our labor-management relations is the best guarantee against the excesses of hasty, undigested legislation of the kind with which the Nation has recently been afflicted.

Science Foundation

In enacting legislation to create a National Science Foundation the Senate did a day's work which may in the long run bring richer benefits to this country than any other action it has taken at this session. In an atomic age, it is vital to our security as well as to our prosperity that we remain in the van of scientific progress. The measure passed by the Senate will encourage young men to embrace science as a career, will provide financial aid for research in the universities of the Nation and will make possible the coordination of scientific studies and development for the national welfare. It is very earnestly to be hoped that the House will find time before its adjournment to consider and act upon this important piece of legislation.

We venture the hope, at the same time, that the House will see fit to restore the provision for aid to the social sciences which the Senate deleted from the measure in defiance of the recommendation of its own Military Affairs Committee. Senators Kilgore and Thomas were altogether right, we think, in arguing that the physical and social sciences are vitally interrelated. As the exploitation of atomic energy has made abundantly clear, the greater our advancement in the physical realm, the greater is our need for the development of social wisdom and political techniques to control what we create.

The Senate has passed a splendid bill, so far as it goes. It has provided, very properly in our judgment, for a single administrator, appointed by and responsible to the President, and has avoided the pitfall suggested to it of making the administrator subordinate to a part-time board of directors. At the same time, it has provided for an independent advisory board which will be free to make recommendations to the administrator or to the President and give both the benefit of its counsel. The patent provisions of the bill are in all respects admirable, and a sound formula was devised for the distribution of research funds. All this merits the indorsement of the House. If arrangements for fostering the social sciences can be included in the legislation after conference with the Senate, Congress will be able to congratulate itself upon a highly constructive contribution to the future of the country.

World Court

The discontent with the United Nations is as widespread as it is well founded. So far, certainly, the new world organization has disappointed the hopes of millions who regard it, as they must regard it, as the fountainhead of future peace and world harmony. But it is a far cry from the feeling that the United Nations has not lived up to what was expected of it to the belief that it should therefore be scrapped and a new organization set up in its place. As the House of Delegates of the American Bar Association has pithily pointed out in a recommendation urging support of the United Nations, "there are no reasons for believing that a new or better start could be made" at this time.

The fact can never be lost to sight that the United Nations is a very new and still largely untried organization. Inevitably it has had to grope its way. It may take years before it can hope to reach the full measure of its effectiveness. But this does not mean that this country or any other nation interested in the future of the United Nations can afford to sit by and let nature take its course. On the contrary, it is incumbent upon us to do everything in our power to support and strengthen the organization. One of the first things the United States can do, as the Bar Association points out, is to accept the compulsory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice. "Probably no development in connection with the United Nations," says the report of the House of Delegates, "has been as keenly disappointing and as inexplicable to the American lawyers" as the failure to take this step.

For some time a resolution to plug up this gaping hole in our international commitments on behalf of world peace has been before the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate. Introduced by Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon, it has bipartisan backing. There is no legitimate reason why it should not be voted out by that committee and acted on at the earliest possible moment.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters of less than 200 words will be given preference. All letters are subject to condensation.

Pro-OPA Slant

I confess to considerable annoyance at the pro-OPA attitude of The Post and some of its letter-writing correspondents. The Post has an unchallenged right editorially to bemoan the passing of the pricing agency. It has no right, however, to "color" practically every news story it has printed on the subject and to give to such news stories a pro-OPA slant.

As to your letter-writing correspondents of July 3:

Robert Y. Fluno of Minneapolis follows the left wing and Communist Party line by blaming Congress. Every economist worth his salt privately or publicly predicted that when President Truman bowed to organized labor's demands and removed wage controls a break in the price line was inevitable. This break occurred before OPA folded on July 1. That agency had already granted over 500 price increases—increases made necessary to meet the excessive wage demands of the Administration's CIO pets.

Jane McReynolds describes as "clever" the timing of our Russian friends in announcing a 40 per cent price reduction on the "very day the United States faces the abolishment of OPA and a drastic rise in the cost of most consumer goods." Miss McReynolds fails to tell us, however, that even with a 40 per cent reduction the cost of a pair of shoes in Sovietland is—with rubles translated into our dollars—approximately $100.

Bikini Test

Among the usually excellent editorials of The Post on July 2 was "Greatest Show on Earth," an attempt to disqualify a scientific experiment by sarcasm, which is a paltry weapon for such an endeavor. The sole disqualifying arguments were based on: (1) Armchair predictions that no fleet would be found in such a deployment (as they were at Pearl Harbor and are now up and down the coasts of America) and that no aviation strategist would employ the atomb bomb against a fleet; (2) the atom bomb is primarily a political problem. The Post condemns the Navy for the very thing that it is to be praised for: Conducting the test along scientific lines instead of simulating naval maneuvers.

An attempt to simulate real life conditions would necessitate testing every possible arrangement of naval vessels. The point of a scientific experiment is to gain the greatest possible amount of information by means of measurement. Observation of damage to ships near and far, possibly affecting changes in naval design, construction and tactics, is only one phase of the experiment. Also being measured are the effects of the bomb on life, materials, instruments and many other things not listed in press reports.

The Post is right in saying the bomb is a political problem. But the political aspect is still so far from being solved that the military phase is extremely important.

"Paderewski"

In a letter to The Post of July 3, Mr. Michael Kwapiszewski has protested against my laying a wreath, as Charge d'Affaires of Poland, on the tomb of one of the immortal great Poles, Inacy Paderewski, on the fifth anniversary of his death, calling it "this brazen desecration."

Mr. Kwapiszewski based his uncalled-for provocation on a claim that he is thoroughly familiar with Mr. Paderewski's conception of democracy and freedom, and entitled to interpret it. His letter gives the lie to this claim. Paderewski's greatness, apart from his artistry, was in his magnitude of heart, sense of tolerance for those who opposed him, and love for Poland without any reservation. Mr. Kwapiszewski's conception of democracy and freedom seems to be pettiness, lack of tolerance for his opponents, and dislike for Poland if it does not suit his narrow, unprogressive ideas.

"Punishing UNRRA"

Editorial censure to the contrary, the man in the street feels that Congress did right in withholding our UNRRA money from countries which refuse freedom of information.

Public opinion in America was overwhelmingly opposed to granting John L. Lewis complete control of a miners' protective fund (essentially a public tax). Here however, the American press would at least be free to investigate or criticize.

Not so in Russia or in the countries she has seized. Our hard-earned money might, and doubtless would, be used for the benefit of the ruling minority, the absolutely autocratic governing class. Even if they squandered it all, none would dare call them to account.

To say under these conditions that refusal of UNRRA aid is playing politics with human misery may have a lot of worthy sentiment behind it, but one fails to see any signs of logic or common sense in questioning our right in withholding our UNRRA money in this manner.

Subways As A Traffic Solution

As the basis for his condemnation of General Grant's opposition to a "60-million-dollar subway," Clarence Armstrong in his letter, published June 28, makes the remarkable assertion that this subway plan is "to end once and for all the traffic problem in Washington." He then proceeds to condemn "patching up" plans which he attributes to General Grant.

Of course the above description should be reversed. The proposed 60-million-dollar subway is the "patch." It is designed merely to alleviate present conditions and thereby, it is hoped, protect the downtown shopping district's realty values. Its proponents say that if it succeeds in reducing street traffic congestion (vehicular, not pedestrian—the latter would be increased) by giving streetcars an underground street of their own, more people would be brought into the central shopping area. In other words, more free-wheel vehicles would come downtown to use the space vacated by the streetcars.

But in that case the traffic congestion would be as bad as it is now except, perhaps, for more rapid movement. Then the logical proposal would be to continue what we had started and extend the subways and change the rolling stock from streetcars to trains. Then when congestion again caught up, the logical proposal would be to build other subways under the existing subways. That is what New York has done, though it had no idea of what it was getting into when it built its first subway. Nor did it foresee that it would have to raise its debt limit before it built its later subways.

New York used to be quoted as an illustration of how subways solve the traffic problem. But the proponents of the proposed Washington subways do not use that tried and discredited illustration. Nor do they call attention to the fact that neither the first New York subway nor all of the later subways saved the old retail shopping area. In spite of the subways, or regardless of them, the shopping center moved and it is now a long distance from where it was when the first subway was built.

But to get back to Mr. Armstrong's idea of ending "once and for all the traffic problem in Washington." One does not solve a problem by considering only part of it and disregarding the rest. Traffic does not exist because of itself—aimless joy-riding is a negligible factor. It exists because people wish to get to and from specific places. So the traffic problem includes points of origin and of destination. For example, a building causes a certain amount of traffic in accordance with its size and the type of its occupancy.

Assuming that the traffic capacity of existing streets is just adequate to serve existing buildings, then if the size and the occupancy of the buildings is increased, obviously the traffic capacity of the abutting streets will be over-taxed. The easy answer is to increase the traffic capacity of the streets. We have done that by street widening. But street widening has evident limitations. So now we propose to build a second street underground. Still we make no suggestion as to checking increased traffic demands due to increasing size of buildings. So whatever we provide in the way of traffic facilities soon becomes inadequate.

Evidently a solution of the traffic problem lies in establishing a balance between the traffic capacity of the streets and the traffic needs of abutting property plus a margin for through traffic. That balance can be established at any one of several levels; the present surface level or an elevated roadway level or a subway level, or all three. But somewhere the balance must be established. And of them the most economical is the surface level, the most expensive is the subway level.

JOHN IHLDER.
Washington.

I submit that there is a good reason why Washington should have, in proportion to its population, several times as many taxicabs as New York. New York has a rapid, efficient public transportation system consisting of fast subways. Washington has a system which is exasperating slow, dilatory, and inefficient. What this city needs is an adequate subway system—now. With an adequate system of mass transportation, the necessity for a vast fleet of taxicabs would vanish.

I've heard some people claim that it isn't practical to build subways here because of the lowness and swampiness of the land on which Washington is built. Poppycock! How in thunder, if that is the case, did the Baltimore & Ohio and Pennsylvania railroads manage to build tunnels? If they have built subways, why can't the municipality of Washington do likewise?

Bilbo Again

ALL OVER the country there will be gloom at the outcome of Mississippi's election. The man Bilbo is back for another six years after a primary campaign of exceptional demagoguery on the explosive theme of white supremacy.

One of Bilbo's chief assets was the series of attacks directed at him from outside the State. He told Mississippians time after time that the North was trying to dictate who should be Senator of the sovereign State of Mississippi.

To prove his case, he waved editions of national magazines carrying articles showing Bilbo's record. His listeners were not likely to read such articles. But they understood that outsiders were trying to interfere with their democratic rights. The carpetbag threat is still a bitter memory in the deep South.

The other string that Bilbo twanged was the promise of Federal benefits—subsidies for the farmers, bonuses for the veterans and so on down the line. Though the carpetbag rule ended many years ago, the truth is that Mississippi is an economic colony of the North, dependent on the favors of either big business or big Government. Demagogues like Bilbo hold out the promise of crumbs from Washington or New York. Such demagogues are themselves the end product of a system of colonial dependence.

IN GEORGIA, an active and effective revolt is aimed at this system. Gov. Ellis Arnall, who has made himself the leader of the new South, wants to give his region an equal chance to develop industry and end the colonialism which decrees the South shall be a producer of raw materials. That is the meaning of Arnall's suit in the Supreme Court to compel an equalization of railroad freight rates.

At the same time, Arnall is fighting such ugly manifestations of frustration and fear as the Ku Klux Klan. Besides being an enormously shrewd politician—which you have to be in the South, where politics is really competitive—Arnall has courage and imagination.

This may be wishful thinking, but it's just possible that Bilbo's narrow victory over the field in Mississippi is the last gasp of old-fashioned Bourbonism in the South. The stirrings of something like a revolution can be heard from below the Mason-Dixon Line.

At any rate, in one department of Southern life a big change is taking place. Negroes are voting in Democratic primaries in State after State. In some States it has given rise to threats and intimidation, but elsewhere it appears to be accepted. In Texas the Progressive Voters League of Dallas reports that out of 600,000 Negroes in the State, 150,000 have paid the poll tax, and 50,000 are exempt, so that perhaps as many as a third will vote in the primary on July 27. Moreover, candidates are appealing for the Negro as they would for white votes.

Many Southern newspapers are leading the way in a sane attitude toward this issue. Some editors have pointed out that unless they are forced into a rigid racial bloc, Negro voters are likely to split along the same lines as white voters. This was put very well by the Columbia Record of Columbia, S. C., a State, incidentally, which has taken special steps to circumvent the fifteenth amendment:

"The Negroes are no more united than the whites. They have different and divergent views. Normally some of them would vote for one candidate and some for another, as the experience of North Carolina, Virginia and other States in which they already vote proves."

PERHAPS THE real test has not yet come. We are still in a period of prosperity, or comparative prosperity. In a slump, with fierce competition for jobs, racial hatreds might flame over the issue of equality at the poll.

Bilbo used the Fair Employment Practices Committee as a political punching bag in his campaign. He promised to filibuster against any FEPC law. This coincided with the release of the Fair Employment Committee's final report from Chairman Malcolm Ross containing this significant statement:

"Studies made by and for the committee since VJ-Day show that the wartime gains of Negro, Mexican-American and Jewish workers are being dissipated through an unchecked revival of discriminatory practices. The future status of minority group workers depends, the committee believes, on the course of action to be taken by Congress relative to passage of Federal fair employment legislation."

To the demagogue from Mississippi with a brassy voice, that is a challenge. Six more years of Bilbo is an affliction no optimism for the future can gloss over.

Traffic Inconsistency

You were once before so kind as to publish a letter of mine in which I pointed out the lamentable state of affairs at your own doorstep, namely in the way traffic is regulated at the corner of 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave.

Today I got off a southbound car coming down 14th st. at the corner of Pennsylvania ave. The light was red. In spite of that the car started to move, to my great astonishment, and turned left. Had some one not pulled me back I might not have been spared to write this letter.

I then noticed a policeman standing on the other side of the avenue whom I had not noticed before, who had apparently signaled to the car to turn. Surely if traffic is being regulated by a policeman, the lights should stop working.

U. S. Workers Enter Contest By the Score

Scores of entries have been made in The Post annual and sick leave contest for Federal workers. In fact, they kept Jerry Kluttz so busy yesterday that he couldn't find time to write his Federal Diary for today.

The contest has been extended until Wednesday midnight because of the long weekend for Government employes. The winners, of course, haven't been selected, but Kluttz dropped a hint yesterday when he said:

"We already have in entries from any number of Federal workers who will smash the on-the-job record of Representative Earl Wilson (R., Ind.) or any other member of Congress. Every mail brings in a batch of entries which show the faithfulness of Federal workers."

Kluttz got the idea for the contest after Wilson said Federal workers were shirkers. "I just wanted to prove to Wilson how wrong he was," said Kluttz, "and the contest will do it beyond any doubt."

The Post will give $100 war bonds to each of these four winners: the man and woman employe who have served longest without taking any sick leave, and the man and the woman who have turned the most annual leave back to the Government.

The winners will be feted at a luncheon to be announced later and they will be given recognition by top leaders in Government.

A complicating factor has arisen, particularly in regard to annual leave. It seems that old leave records in many agencies are either unavailable or else they have been destroyed and the entries of many employes can't be verified precisely.

However, Kluttz said yesterday that entries would be accepted even if the old leave records are unavailable if they are made to the best of knowledge of both the employe and his superior.

Warrenton Horse Show Set July 13

Warrenton, Va., July 5 (AP).—Separate divisions for draft horses, ponies, hunters and race horses will be featured at the first annual show of breeding stock to be held by the Virginia Horsemen's Association Saturday, July 13, at the Warrenton Horse Show Grounds.

Draft and pony classes will be judged in the morning, beginning at 10 a. m. the afternoon will be given over to the showing of hunting and racing divisions, starting at 1:30 p. m.

Each of the four divisions will have a nationally known judge, including J. A. Estes, editor of the Blood Horse, Lexington, Ky., officiating in the racing division; Dr. R. L. Humphrey, Mountville, hunter division; Mrs. Edgar Scott, Villanova, PPa., pony division, and Dan Wight, Frederick, Md., draft horses.

Present indications are for a highly successful show, with all divisions well filled.

Old Dominion Accident Toll Rises to Seven

By the Associated Press

Highway deaths in Virginia over the July 4 holiday period have risen to six, with numerous injuries reported. A seventh fatality was recorded at a target shooting match.

A man identified as George Goltish of Rock Hill, Md., and a child were burned to death yesterday when the truck in which they were riding ran off Route One near Colansville in Caroline County, hit a tree and burst into flames.

Miss Jane Adams 20, of Newport News, died in a hospital at Newport News Thursday night, and Reginald Harmon, 3, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Harmon of Williamson rd., was the fourth fatality.

Miss Adams was injured in the collision of a holiday picnic truck and a passenger car in Newport News Thursday night. Two other persons were treated for injuries from the same accident—William Robert Phelps, 21, and J. R. Cole, both of Newport News.

The Harmon child died yesterday from injuries received in an automobile-truck collision on 10th st. extension a short distance northwest of the Roanoke city limits. Six others, including the child's parents, were injured.

James Joseph Callahan, 76, of Norfolk, and William R. Holloman, 40, of South Norfolk, a cab driver, died in Norfolk Thursday of injuries suffered earlier in vehicular accidents.

Callahan was struck by a "motor-scooter in crossing the street, and Holloman was fatally injured when his cab was struck by a freight train.

Elbert W. Breeden, 62-year-old Rockingham County farmer, became another Fourth of July victim in a shooting accident that claimed his life yesterday as he watched a target match near Elkton.

Three persons were injured—one seriously—in an accident in Dinwiddie County yesterday when an automobile operated by Waverly B. Cobb of Norfolk struck and killed a horse while attempting to avoid another car after the horse had wandered into the road. Cobb's wife, who with her infant was thrown from the car, was seriously hurt when the dead animal fell on her.

Maryland Holiday Toll At Near-Record Low

Despite the return of automobiles in prewar numbers to the highways on Independence Day and record crowds at shore and ocean resorts, Maryland enjoyed what perhaps was its most "safe and sane" Fourth in many years.

One drowning and one traffic fatality had blotted an otherwise spotless record of holiday deaths.

Not a single child was reported to have been injured by fireworks. For that matter, few, if any, fire works were set off except under trained supervision at organized celebrations. An enactment of the General Assembly has made fireworks displays illegal in any section of the State without permission of the State insurance commissioner.

A veteran member of the Maryland State police said last night at headquarters that never before in his memory of Independence Days of the past have Maryland roads been so free from accidents.

The one traffic death reported was that of Dorothy Marie Young, 20-month-old Negro of Trappe, who was thrown from an automobile when it sideswiped a pole near Easton late Thursday.

The drowning occurred in Cypress Creek, Anne Arundel County, when Carlos Roduguez, 26, of Baltimore, failed in his attempt to swim across the creek and went under.

Two motorboat explosions were the most spectacular accidents of the day. Both occurred in Anne Arundel County waters and injured a total of five persons, all Baltimoreans.

Department Store Union Refuses 10% Pay Raise

Employes of Waadward & Lothrop are negotiating with management to secure a return to a 5-day workweek with current 6½-day straight time pay.

A company offer yesterday to restore the shorter workweek and boost basic wages by 10 per cent were rejected by employes' representatives, according to Maurice F. Adamson, a member of the unaffiliated union's board of trustees.

C. G. Booth, company personnel director, declined to comment on progress of negotiations.

The company was on a 40-hour week prior to the war and now pays time and a half for the sixth workday.

Adamson said he hoped for another company proposal within a few days.

Surveys Drafted For Bayside Park

Baltimore, July 5 (AP).—Chairman Robert M. Reindollar of the State Roads Commission reported right-of-way surveys will be completed in a week or 10 days on a site for the proposed Bayside Park near Lusby in Calvert County.

The study involves an examination of titles, appraisals, and mapping of properties. Purchase of the Lusby site for the park, which would include conservation and demonstration areas, has been recommended by the State Planning Commission and the Board of Natural Resources.

Forewarned, Police Fail to Halt Shooting

Baltimore, July 5 (AP).—Baltimore police said today that acting on a report from the daughter of Mrs. Helen Branson, 40, they had warned Cumberland authorities eight hours before Mrs. Branson was shot and seriously wounded in the western Maryland city Wednesday night.

Chief Inspector M. J. Wallace of the Baltimore police said Mrs. Gladys Sickler, daughter of Mrs. Branson, informed police shortly after noon Wednesday that Samuel Branson, her stepfather, had left for Cumberland with the intention to shoot his wife.

Mrs. Branson is being treated at Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, for a bullet wound in her abdomen. Her husband is being held by police. Both are from Baltimore.

Wallace said a teletype message was sent to State police at Cumberland at 1:38 p. m. Wednesday, stating that Branson had arrived at 1 p. m. in Cumberland, where his wife had gone to spend Independence Day.

At 10:24 that night, Wallace said, police here received a message from State police in Cumberland that Mrs. Branson had been shot and that her husband was being held.

State police said the Baltimore police message had been relayed by telephone to Cumberland authorities about 2 p. m. Eight hours later Mrs. Branson was shot while walking along a street.

Husband Still Held In Cumberland Jail

Cumberland, Md., July 5 (AP).—Samuel Joseph Branson, 40, Baltimore machine shop foreman, remained in the city jail today pending the outcome of a police investigation into the shooting of his wife, Helen, 40.

Police quoted Branson as saying he and his wife had an argument in a Baltimore tavern last Saturday night. She had accused him of "running around," police said, and on meeting her here Wednesday night he charged her with seeing her first husband.

The Bransons formerly resided in Cumberland.

Battle for Mayor In Court's Hands At Martinsburg

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 5 (AP).—Paul Buxton Martin, Martinsburg newspaperman, seeking to gain the seat of mayor, asked the Berkeley County Circuit Court for a writ to require three Democratic members of the city council to recognize his election.

A certificate of election was issued to Martin, a Republican, after the recent city election, but four Democratic councilmen, including one whose right to qualify is under challenge, contended that Martin failed to meet tax payment requirements under the city charter and was not legally qualified for the office.

A similar challenge was directed against C. O. Caskey, a Democrat, by the three Republican councilmen. This case is now before Circuit Judge D. H. Rodgers who did not act on Martin's petition and said he would ask another jurist to hear the case.

Hearing Set Tuesday For Mrs. Krumholz

Princess Anne, Md., July 5 (AP).—Somerset County States Attorney Prentiss W. Evans announced today that a preliminary hearing for Mrs. Iva P. Krumholz, 40-year-old Princess Anne woman, charged with murdering Rollin R. Riley, of Vineland, N. J., would be held Tuesday in Crisfield.

Evans said he would call three witnesses to testify against Mrs. Krumholz, who is being held without bail in the Somerset County jail here. The hearing, he said, would be before Magistrate John S. Hollins.

Riley, 37, a poultry buyer on the Eastern shore, was found shot in his apartment in Princess Anne June 7. Mrs. Krumholz was arrested in Cincinnati June 25 by FBI agents and waived extradition to Maryland.

Plane to Fly 5 Md. Calves To Colombia

Middletown, Md., July 5 (AP).—Five pure-bred Maryland calves will take to the air July 15, for a trial shipment from New York to Bogota, Colombia.

This will be the first time an airplane has been used to transport Maryland livestock. The journey takes two days.

The Holstein-Friesians, Frederick County dairy cattle, have been bought by Carlos Sanz de Santamaria, Colombian Ambassador to the United States, from J. Homer Remsberg of Middletown.

This is the fourth such consignment shipped from Maryland to South America in recent months. The first three, totaling 75 head, were purchased from Remsberg by Galo Plaza Ecuadorian Ambassador to the United States, and shipped by boat—a two-week voyage.

Remsberg is president of the Maryland State Holstein Association and a director and chairman of extension of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America. He is also the author of a recently published "History and Development of Holstein Cattle in Frederick County, Maryland."

The previous shipments of Frederick County cattle to South America were supervised by Lawrence Myers and Robert Byrne of Thurmont.

5-Man Committee Named to Direct District Methodists

Richmond, Va., July 5 (AP).—A five-man committee temporarily to superintend activities of the Methodist Church in the Richmond district has been named by Bishop W. W. Peele.

The quintet will replace the late Dr. B. M. Persinger, district superintendent, until Bishop Peele names a new superintendent at the annual Virginia Methodist conference in Lynchburg October 16.

The members are the Rev. Dr. Walter C. Gum, pastor of the Centenary Methodist Church, Richmond, chairman; the Rev. William Archer Wright, pastor of the Highland Park Methodist Church; the Rev. A. P. Williams, Monument Methodist Church; the Rev. Dr. P. M. Hank, Berryman Methodist Church, and the Rev. R. M. White, executive secretary of the Virginia Conference Board of Education.

Train Kills W. Va. Man

Paw Paw, W. Va., July 5 (AP).—The death of William McCoole, 24, Paw Paw, whose body was found along the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks here yesterday, has been termed accidental by State and Morgan County authorities.

Official Count: O'Conor Won By 22,539

Baltimore, July 5 (AP).—Complete official returns from the Democratic primary election in Maryland June 24 showed today that Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor, aspiring to the United States Senate, polled more votes than any other candidate in any race.

O'Conor, who has never lost an election, piled up 117,889 votes to win the Democratic nomination for the Senate. His defeated opponent, Senator George L. Radcliffe, seeking renomination for a third term, polled 95,350, and the third candidate, John Laveck of Catonsville, 9566.

The Governor's Republican opponent in the November general election will be former Brig. Gen. D. John Markey of Walkersville. Official Republican returns have not been compiled, but Markey held a comfortable majority over his two primary opponents on the basis of unofficial, incomplete returns.

Running O'Conor a close second in total votes was William Preston Lane, jr., Hagerstown publisher and banker, who amassed 104,375 to win the Democratic nomination for Governor.

State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes was second to Lane in the Democratic gubernatorial race with a total of 86,447 and Representative H. Streett Baldwin of Baltimore County was third with 39,971. Four minor candidates trailed far behind.

In the general election Lane will run against Mayor Theodore Roosevelt McKeldin of Baltimore, who, on the basis of incomplete and unofficial returns, easily defeated Herman L. Mills, Hagerstown businessman, for the Republican nomination for Governor.

Hall Hammond, now deputy State attorney general, won the Democratic nomination for attorney general by polling 85,057 votes. Trailing him were E. Earle Cobey of Cumberland, 53,263; Speaker of the House John S. White of Hyattsville, 31,728, and J. Deweese Carter of Denton, 18,262.

Lacy in Runaway

George Cochran Doub of Owings Mills was unopposed for the Republican nomination for attorney general.

James J. Lacy of Baltimore made a runaway of the race for the Democratic nomination for State comptroller, amassing a total of 84,677 votes, with 43,000 of them in the city.

His closest competitors were Charles Henry Roloson, jr., of Baltimore, with 44,994, and State Senator John B. Funk of Frederick, 38,073. Also rans were Charles E. Baden, Baltimore, 9,054; Daniel H. Carroll of Baltimore, 8,891, and Harold Loreman Alisbury, 13,905.

Alexander T. Grier of Salisbury was unopposed for the Republican nomination for comptroller.

Ashman Files Suit, Demanding Recount

Baltimore, July 5 (AP).—George Ashman, defeated candidate for Democratic State Central Committeeman from the Fifth District, filed suit in Baltimore City Court today to obtain a writ of mandamus directing local election officials to grant him a recount.

Ashman sued the board of election supervisors, stating they had denied him a recount because he had failed to request it within seven days after the date of the primary. The plaintiff contended official counting of ballots from his district was not completed until the eighth day after the primary, and that, therefore, he could not have known the results.

He said today he did not know "officially" of the election result, but added he believed the count—which he intends to challenge—placed him some 190 votes behind.

Carwile Claims Hutchinson Campaign Backed by PAC

Richmond, Va., July 5.—Howard H. Carwile, of Richmond, an independent candidate for the U. S. Senate, wrote Martin A. Hutchinson, a candidate for the Democratic nomination, today that "it is no secret that your candidacy is being supported by the labor organizations of Virginia because they are mostly anti-Byrd forces."

Carwile said he didn't intend to be "nosey," but that some issues raised by Hutchinson in recent speeches "weighed so heavy on my mind that I find it difficult to rest at night."

"First," Carwile wrote, "I cannot figure out how you are going to escape voting a Republican ticket this fall. You proved to us quite ably that Senator Harry Byrd is a Republican because he has voted with the Republicans in the National Congress 61 per cent of time, for the last 12 years. Now, Mr. Hutchinson, you are fully aware of your pledge as a Democrat and as a candidate for office in the Democratic primary, to support the survivor of the primary. If Senator Byrd survives the primary, please explain to us, feeble laymen, how you are going to live up to your pledge and vote for Harry Byrd without voting a Republican ticket. You yourself have demonstrated to my complete satisfaction that Byrd is a loyal Republican.

"Second, I have not been able to grasp how you can consistently attack Harry Byrd for building up a monstrous bugaboo out of certain national labor leaders, and then in the next breath depict John L. Lewis as a fearful dictator. You yourself have adopted the political strategy of Harry Byrd.

"Third, I am distressed to hear you constantly proclaiming that the CIO-PAC is not spending a penny in your behalf. I am quite convinced that you are fooling no one but yourself. In order for any organization to help finance a campaign, it does not necessarily turn funds over to the candidate himself for expenditure, but there are scores of ways in which a sympathetic organization can indirectly finance its favorite candidate for public office.

"Please do not misunderstand me, I am not condemning our candidacy because it is being financed partially by labor groups, but I merely would like to see all candidates be outspoken and fair to the people of this State. It is no secret that your candidacy is being supported by the labor organizations of Virginia because they are mostly anti-Byrd forces. You should welcome their support and publicly express your gratitude for such support; you should cease apologizing to the Tories of this commonwealth for the fact that labor is supporting you; you should refrain from minimizing the importance of the labor vote, as you did in your speech at Charlotte courthouse yesterday . . ."

Deacon's Body Found in Ditch; Youth Is Held

Charlottesville, Va., July 5 (AP).—John B. Anthony, 61, operator of a truck and chicken farm near Charlottesville, was found dead this morning on Highway 29, about 10 miles north of the city, and Albemarle County Commonwealth's Attorney W. O. Fife immediately started an investigation.

A Virginia Stage Lines bus driver discovered the body in a ditch beside the highway.

A youth who gave his name as Wilbur Shiflett of Ruckersville, Greene County, found seated in Anthony's car about 100 feet from the body, was placed under arrest by State police, called by the bus driver. State Trooper L. A. Brugh said several empty wine bottles were scattered about the car and a half-empty bottle was found inside it.

Anthony, a former Charlottesville businessman, was a deacon of the First Presbyterian Church.

Midshipmen Start Cruise Today on Three Warships

Annapolis, Md., July 5.—The first postwar summer cruise of the Naval Academy midshipmen will begin tomorrow when first and third classmen board the battleships Washington and North Carolina and second classmen the aircraft carrier Randolph.

Hundreds of middies will swarm aboard the capital ships tomorrow morning before 7 o'clock for cruises which will take them as far north as Quonset, R. I., and south to the Navy's drill grounds in the Culebra-Guantanamo area.

Meanwhile, other classmates will pursue their studies at the academy, where second classmen will begin instruction in flight lore under the supervision of the new aviation department.

The cruises beginning tomorrow will be followed by a second group to begin August 17.

The battleship group will touch Newport, R. I., the Guantanamo area, and have liberty at New York, Newport and Norfolk, while the carrier group will include the same stops but also visit the naval air testing station at Patuxent.

Md. Span Traffic Shows Sharp Gain

Baltimore, July 5 (AP).—Traffic on the Susquehanna River Bridge during June showed a 61.68 increase over the same period last year, and Potomac River Bridge traffic rose 90.68 per cent, William A. Codd, chief auditor of the State Roads Commission, announced.

Ferry transactions increased 44.26 per cent over 1945 figures for the corresponding period, he said.

A total of 325,882 vehicles used the Susquehanna Bridge last month; Potomac Bridge total transactions were 46,774, and on the Chesapeake Bay ferry system, total transactions for June were 149,242.

Deputy Hunts Woman, Then Finds Her in Jail

Hagerstown, Md., July 5 (AP).—Deputy Sheriff Clever Reynolds, stationed at the Washington County Jail, spent the afternoon running down tips on the whereabouts of a woman upon whom he was to serve legal notice.

Ready to give up, he returned and found her in the only place he hadn't thought of investigating—the jail, where she was serving a 15-day sentence.

Hoffman Herd In June Leads Prince William

Manassas, Va., July 5 (Spl.).—The herd of Frank Lee Hoffman, Glenwood Farm, Catharpin, led the Prince William County Dairy Herd Improvement Association in June, according to John N. Neese, testing supervisor.

Of the 24 herds tested by the association, Mr. Hoffman's registered and grade Holstein herd topped the list with an average production of 1014 pounds of milk and 38.4 pounds butterfat per cow.

The registered Holstein herd of Mrs. K. Loring Moore, Bristow, rated second with an average production of 1003 pounds milk and 32.6 pounds butterfat per cow.

Third place was rated by the herd of T. G. Hutchison, Aldie, whose cows averaged 900 pounds milk and 32.1 pounds butterfat each. J. C. Kincheloe's Nokesville herd produced an average of 974 pounds milk and 32.0 pounds butterfat to rate fourth place and the Clover Hill Farm herd, Manassas, W. W. Johnson, owner, was fifth with an average production of 592 pounds milk and 31.6 pounds butterfat per cow.

Manassas Officer Honored

Lieut. Howard H. Cooksey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul J. Cooksey of Manassas, has been assigned to the honor guard for Gen. Douglas MacArthur at headquarters in Tokyo. Lieutenant Cooksey recently arrived in Japan from the States, where he had been recuperating from wounds received in the south Pacific area. The engagement of Lieutenant Cooksey and Miss Althea Maitland Hooff of Manassas has been announced by Miss Hooff's mother, Mrs. Allison A. Hooff. The wedding will take place in Tokyo.

Park Budget Raised

An increase of approximately $4000 has been made for the upkeep and operation of the Manassas Battlefield Park for the year beginning July 1. The announcement was made by Dr. George B. Cocke, chairman of the Battlefield Park Commission of the Prince William Chamber of Commerce. The amount makes the total appropriation made for the park $10,000 for the year.

C. E. Metz Dies; Retired Banker

Cumberland, Md., July 5 (AP).—Charles E. Metz, former cashier of the Second National Bank, where he was an employe for 51 years, died at his home here last night.

A native of Cumberland, he was a son of the late Samuel and Clara Poole Metz. He retired from his bank duties five years ago because of ill health.

Metz was a Mason, Knights Templar, a Shriner and a Methodist.

Surviving are two sons, Charles E. Metz, jr., Trenton, N. J., and John C. Metz, Cumberland; a brother, William T. Metz, Meyersdale, Pa., and a sister, Mrs. John H. Dwyer, Cumberland. His wife died in January.

Ropp, Clark Head Panhandle Group

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 5 (AP).—Two county school superintendents headed today the Eastern Panhandle Association, a good-will group in this three-county eastern West Virginia area.

The association, after a mail ballot, announced the reelection of Superintendent G. William Ropp of Berkeley County as president and the selection of Superintendent Price Clark of Morgan County as vice president. G. C. McKown, Martinsburg newspaper editor, is holdover secretary-treasurer.

Ropp said the group is planning a tour August 14-15 to include visits at Keyser, Clarksburg, Elkins and Romney.

Will Lionize Va. Apple

Winchester, Va., July 5.—Winchester's Lions Club has voted to ship a sufficient quantity of Frederick County apples to the Lions' International convention in Philadelphia July 15-19, to "make a delicious impression on fellow members expected from all points of the Western Hemisphere."

Area Groups To Air Rent Grievances

Annapolis, Md., July 5 (AP).—Governor O'Conor announced today he would appoint advisory fair-rent committees for different section of Maryland, in accordance with a suggestion by the Baltimore Real Estate Board.

He said he had invited recommendations for appointments in telegrams sent to the real estate board, the Baltimore Association the Maryland Citizens Political Action Committee, and the Apartment House Owners Association.

For D. C. Area Also

The first committees to be appointed, he said, would cover the following areas:

Baltimore Metropolitan area, Cumberland, Hagerstown, Washington suburban area (parts of Montgomery and Prince Georges County).

Citizens with rent grievances will have opportunity to air them before these groups, and the committees will be left free to determine action in individual cases, the Governor said.

He added that data thus assembled "might be of cosiderable use to the State in revealing the need for emergency legislation."

While no formal opinion has been rendered by the State law department, the chief executive declared, State law officers "are inclined to the belief that a valid statute can be drawn to control rents in the event a dire necessity exists resulting from an extraordinary housing shortage."

As for the committees, funds will be made available to them and funds will be provided. The personnel of State departments as well as records will be made available for use by the groups, the Governor asserted.

Also Seek Price Control

Meanwhile, Maryland consumers coped with the fifth day of rising prices today.

Attorney General William Curran declined to comment on the constitutionality of proposed price-control legislation in Maryland, but said he would release an opinion when it was ready.

Delegate Leon A. Rubenstein of Baltimore had urged Governor O'Conor to call a special session of the Legislature to enact emergency price controls. The Governor asked Curran for an opinion on the Legislature's authority to enact such controls.

Schine Theaters In 3 Md. Cities Affected by Order

Buffalo, N. Y., July 5 (AP).—Federal Judge John Knight ruled as unacceptable today several plans suggested by the Schine Theaters, Inc., for realignment of its interests and signed an order directing divestiture of theaters in New York, Ohio, Maryland and Kentucky under a plan adopted by the court.

The court directed that the chain sell its interests in all theaters except one in each of the following Maryland communities: Cambridge and Easton. The orders also directed the sale of the Strand Theater in Cumberland, Md.

A trustee will be appointed as agent of the court to ascertain the value of the theater interests in question and to negotiate and close the sales. Names of the theaters which the chain elects to retain must be filed with the court within 30 days. The firm would divest itself of about 80 of its 160 theaters under the Government's plan.

In his opinion, Judge Knight held that divestiture of the theaters as ordered was necessary to effectuate the policy of the Government for "restoration of free enterprise and open competition among all branches of the motion picture industry."

Father of 2 Held On Rape Charge

Princess Anne, Md., July 5 (AP).—Robert Allen Pusey, 29, of Pocomoke City, married and the father of two children, has been charged with raping a 14-year-old daughter of a prominent Somerset County farm family, Somerset County State's Attorney Prentiss W. Evans said today.

Evans said Pusey, a civilian employe of the Chincoteague Naval Air Station, was being held in the Princess Anne Jail on a charge of rape and for investigation. The warrant for Pusey's arrest was issued by Magistrate John S. Holland of Crisfield.

According to the girl, Evans said, a man drove to her home in the Dublin district of Somerset County on Monday afternoon, "made her acquaintance" and later allegedly attacked her in the farm home while her parents were away.

The State's attorney said the girl was a junior high school student. No date for a preliminary hearing has been set, he said.

Fire Department Away for Parade, Building Burns

New Market, Va., July 5 (AP).—The New Market Fire Department visited Mount Jackson, 12 miles away, for a July 4 parade last night and missed a fire here termed the most disastrous in 40 years.

An emergency alarm brought firemen from Mount Jackson, Strasburg, Edinburg and Woodstock to help put out the flames which did an estimated $10,000 damage to the John Waybright Building, but the New Market lads were tangled up in the parade and did not arrive until much later.

BARNABY — By Crockett Johnson

I can't get over it. Who could have advertised an imaginary house for sale? And raised the hopes of all those people . . . ?
I agree. But why did your name appear in the paper?
Somebody's idea of a joke. I'd like to get my hands—
Gosh, Mr. O'Malley—You didn't speak to the people who answered your ad—Now they've gone away.
I was tempted to, m'boy. But they seemed to be in an ugly mood. Hmm.
It makes one wonder . . . If folks are so keen on buying houses . . . why doesn't someone start building them?

GOLF—There is balm for the British despite the fact Sammy Snead walked off with their Open championship at St. Andrew's yesterday. Snead won with the un-startling total of 290 strokes for the 72 holes, and St. Andrew's still defies the subpar 66's, 67's and 68's that American pros have been shooting so consistently on American courses.

POVICH

The British have been looking with suspicion on those 275's and 278's that have been winning American tournaments, and in the light of what happened this week when the Americans were confronted with St. Andrew's, they are justified. American courses don't offer the same hard test of golf, though American pros are still the best in the world.

It is significant that none of the four United States pros in the British Open, Snead, Johnny Bulla, Lawson Little and Joe Kirkwood, succeeded in shooting a single round in better than 71. Bulla went as high as a 77, and Little and Kirkwood had one round of 78. Snead's final round was a 75, a figure that would have doomed him in a United States tournament, but at St. Andrew's it put him over.

Johnny Bulla took a fat seven on the St. Andrew's seventeenth when his ball landed on a rock-strewn road that was in bounds. The British accept such items as the natural hazards of golf. Any American greens' committee chairman would swoon at such a situation marring the beautification of his course. In the British view, our courses are too beautiful, the golf synonym for too easy.

RACING—The evidence now is that New York is losing out as the East's racing center and if the track bosses are not concerned, they should be. They are losing the best horses and much of the mutuel play to tracks in surrounding States, with both bettors and horsemen wise to the drawbacks of the 16 per cent mutuel "take" that goes to the tracks and the State.

At Jamaica on July 4, the crowd was 15,000 less than on July 4 a year ago at Belmont, and the mutuel handle was more than one million dollars less than on the same day a year ago. Meanwhile, tracks in other States, at Delaware, Narragansett and Suffolk, all showed increased crowds and mutuel handles.

Stanley Woodward, of the Herald-Tribune, reports that as much money as before is being bet on the New York races, but not at the tracks. The bookmakers are getting a greater bulk of the play these days, under a plan that relieves the bettors from absorbing all of the 16 per cent take-out. The bookies have a new plan under which they remit 5 per cent to the bettor, thus restoring, in effect, the former 11 per cent take-out that prevailed before New York City dipped into the tax till of the tracks.

TED WILLIAMS—The hitting ability of Ted Williams must be some kind of myth to Yankee Stadium fans. In the five games he has played in Yankee Stadium this year, he hasn't come close to getting any kind of a hit, and in 10 games between the Yanks and Red Sox this season Williams has a grand batting average of .097, with three singles in 31 times at bat.

It is significant, though, that with Williams a nonentity against the Yanks, the Red Sox have done no worse than split the 10 games thus far with the New York club, indicating that Boston is not a one-man ball club.

The fac that Williams hasn't been hitting against the Yankees hardly disturbs the view of him that all of the league's pitchers still hold. Bob Feller says he's the toughest guy in the league to get out, and I don't know where a hitter could get a higher compliment. There are 11 games left between the Yankees and Red Sox, and Yankee fans might yet learn that Williams is still in the league.

PITCHERS—It's a pretty race between Hal Newhouser and Bob Feller for the honor of pitching the most winning games in the American League. At this point, Newhouser tops the Cleveland fireball artist with 15 victories, one more than Feller, with both striving for he coveted 30-victory goal.

With the season not quite half over, both Feller and Newhouser could make it a 30-win year. Newhouser won 29 in 1944, and at the present pace he is 19 days ahead of his 1944 mark. Feller won 27 in 1940, and in that season he didn't win his fourteenth until July 14.

Feller is generally rated a better pitcher than Newhouser, but it is no certainty that he will outstrip the Tiger southpaw in games won. Feller has ousted Newhouser as the strikeout king, a role Newhouser enjoyed during Feller's Navy service, but in pitching for the harder-hitting Tigers, Newhouser has an edge over the Cleveland ace.

10 Rounds at Stadium

Jack, Angott Finish Drills Today for Monday's Fight

Beau Jack and Sammy Angott will complete final training today in preparation for their scheduled 10-round setto Monday night at Griffith Stadium.

Angott will wind up first by working with a battery of sparring partners at 1 p. m. in the Liberty A. C. gym, and Jack will take the ring an hour later.

Yesterday both fighters packed the Ninth st. sweatshop as they went through their conditioning maneuvers. The colorful Jack, clad in his traditional white ring togs, punched his sparmates furiously throughout his session, while his opponent appeared to be in excellent shape when he took the ring.

Smuggy Hursey, an 18-year-old youngster who is compiling an impressive string of knockouts in District appearances, will fight welterweight Barry Wright Monday night in a special six-round battle, according to an announcement made by Promoter Goldie Ahearn last night. This stacks up as a grudge affair inasmuch as the durable Wright holds a decision over the Washington lad.

Supporting the Jack-Angott unpleasantness will be four-rounders between Sam Crawford, a member of the Jack entourage, and Middleweight Marion Klingsmitt, an associate of Sammy Angott, and Henry Conroy vs. Stonewall Jackson (not to be confused with the old Confederate), middleweights. Another four-round match will pit Lightweight Al Guatteri against B-29 Banks.

Monday night's card will be completed by two more fours, as yet unannounced by Promoter Ahearn.

Kelly, Jr., in Oar Final

Senley-On-Thames, July 5 (U.P.).—Jack Kelly, jr., American sailor from Philadelphia and son of an old-time Olympic champion, scored an upset, 4-length victory over Arthur A. Gallagher, fellow Philadelphian and current United States titlist, in the semifinals of the diamond challenge sculls today, rowing the mile and 550-yard course in 9 minutes and 12 seconds.

Billy Talbert Tops Mulloy to Gain River Forest Final

River Forest, Ill., July 5 (AP).—Billy Talbert of Wilmington, Del., the defending champion, "limped" into the final round of the men's singles in the National Clay Courts Tennis Tournament today by eliminating his Davis Cup doubles partner, Gardnar Mulloy of Miami, Fla., 4—6, 6—2, 6—4, 1—6, 6—3.

Second-seeded Talbert suffered a cramp in his left leg in the fifth game of the final set—a recurrence of an injury which contributed to his defeat by Frankie Parker in the national championship finals at Forest Hills last September.

Virginia Wolfenden Kovacs of Oakland, Calif., gained the women's championship round by brushing aside Marta Barnett of Miami, Fla., 6—1, 6—3. The latter had eliminated top-seeded Mary Arnold Prentiss of Los Angeles yesterday.

Shirley Fry of Akron, Ohio, will oppose Barbara Krase of San Francisco in the other women's semifinal tomorrow.

Sammy Snead Shakes Jinx, Wins British Open With 290

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 5 (AP).—Sam Snead today obliterated the jinx that has been trailing him these many yearls.

The drawling Virginian, dogged by ill luck which had confined him to one major title—the PGA in 1942—during nearly a decade of top-flight play, reached the end of the golf rainbow as he won the first postwar British Open championship with a 72-hole total of 290, four strokes better than his closest rivals.

Thus the long-hitting American star joined the parade of famed golfing lights who have won this historic event, one of the most difficult feats in all golfdom, and in so doing quenched forever the disturbing idea that he just couldn't quite make it when it came to the big ones.

For he won this one the hard way, outsteadying a jittery field over the rugged, wind-swept St. Andrews championship course and coming through like a champion in the final payoff holes. No faltering, no blowups such as had been his fate on many another occasion when he had been very, very close. Just good, steady, determined golf.

The rounds of the slammer from Hot Springs, Va., were 71-70—74 and 75, and the 290 was two under par for the famous old St. Andrews course. The last American to win the title was Denny Shute.

Second to Sammy with scores of 294 were Johnny Bulla, another American who also was second in the last British open played in 1939, and South Africa's Bobby Locke. It looked for a while as though each of them had missed a golden opportunity to win by missing two-footers and three putting the home green, but as it turned out it made no difference because Snead, burning up the second nine behind theem in two under par finisheed four strokes in front.

Back of Bulla and Locke at 295 were the veteran Henry Cotton, leader of the field when play started this morning; Little Dai Rees, who fired a record 67 yesterday; Norman Von Nida, the Australian, and Charley Ward, 34-year-old British professional.

The two other American pros—Joe Kirkwood and Lawson Little—finished further back in the field. Kirkwood faltered badly in his morning round today with a 78 and finished with 298, and Little carded a 299. Both turned in 74's for the final round.

SAMMY SNEAD

The 33-year-old Snead's prize money amounts to only 150 pounds ($600) but as this is one of the major international golf events it will be worth much more to him in prestige and exhibition fees when he returns home. Bulla estimated earlier this week that an American pro could make $20,000 out of the title. Snead did not make an estimate.

Snead is flying back to the United Staes July 9 and will play in a tournament in Kansas City July 11.

Sam's trials and disappointments date back to 1936, the year before he first crashed into the national spotlight by winning the Oakland Open with rounds of 69, 65, 69, and 67 for a 270 total. In 1936 he missed out on a bid for P. G. A. title by going o the wrong city to qualify.

In 1938 he posted the wrong score and was disqualified at the Pinehurst (N. C.) Open. The 1939 calamity at Philadelphia has been mentioned, but almost overlook is the fact h etook another eight on the last hole to lose the Los Angeles Open in 1942.

He wice was runnerup in the P. G. A. before crashing through in 1942. In 1940 he lost to Byron Nelson in the finals, one up, and in 1938 he took amerciless shellacking in his match with Little Paul Runyan in the finals, eight and seven.

Snead twice balked on makking the trip to England.

In fact, it took a lot of eleventh-hour talking by Fred Corcoran, tournament manager for the Professional Golfers Association, and a putting lesson by the famed Walter Hagen to get him to make the trip.

Sam's victory made him the eighth American to win the title.

Walter Hagen won it four times in 1922, 1924, 1928 and 1929. Bobby Jones has the second best British Open record, winning it in 1926, 1927 and 1930, when he scored his famous grand slam.

Other American winners were Jock Hutchison, sr., 1921; Jim Barnes, 1925; Tommy Armour, 1931; Gene Sarazen, 1932, and Enny Shute, 1933. Barnes, Hutchison and Armour were British born, but won the title after moving to the United States.

Brazil Amazed At Tunney's Carico Choice

New York, July 5 (INS).—Gene Tunney, former heavyweight champion, today tabbed Enrico Carico of Brazil as a man who might face Joe Louis in Mexico City some time next winter, but the choice caused amazement in Rio De Janeiro.

Tunney first mentioned Carico last week in Mexico City, referring to him as Brazilian heavyweight champion. The president of the Brazilian Confederation of Pugilism, ruling body of the sport, Alfonso Secreto, pooh-poohed the idea. He said today:

"Carico is a three round exhibition fighter who wouldn't last one round with Joe Louis. Brazil has been without a heavyweight champion for six years, but Carico would never qualify in any elimination rounds here.

"Furthermore, Carico is not a Brazilian, but a Portuguese who has been occasionally used for entertainment exhibition matches."

Secreto and South American sports writers said that they had no hint of Carico's whereabouts and that he has not fought in recent months.

Tunney said he saw Carico fight in Brazil in 1944 when he was down there with the Fourth Fleet of the United States Navy. The former champion said:

"I saw him box. He wasn't too bad. But not good. About 190 pounds and 30 years old. He keeps writing me that he wants to fight Louis. That's all I know.

Parks Net Event Slated July 19

Bertelli Suit Moved To Equity Session

Springfield, Mass., July 5 (AP).—Superior Court Judge William C. Giles today directed the transfer to the equity session of the Superior Court in Boston further hearings on a suit against the former Notre Dame football star, Angelo Bertelli, by the Los Angeles Dons professional team.

No date has been set for resumption of hearings.

Bertelli now is under a temporary restraining order barring him from playing "with any other team than the Los Angeles Dons."

$1,276,359 in Taxes

Delaware Park, Del., July 5 (AP). The State of Delaware found today it had realized $1,276,359 in taxes during the recent racing meet here, highest in the local park's history. Last year's taxes amounted to $1,052,186.

France's Yvon Petra Wimbledon Winner

Wimbledon, July 5 (AP).—Thirty-year-old Yvon Petra, who sold his Paris sidewalk cafe six months ago to concentrate on tennis, reaped the first big dividend today when he defeated Geoff Brown, 23-year-old Australian, in a hard-fought final of the All-England championships, 6—2, 6—4, 7—9, 5—7, 6—4.

The giant Frenchman, whose six feet, seven inches earned him the nickname "Eiffel Tower," subdued his much smaller opponent with a whistling service and a smashing game at the net. A capacity crowd of 14,000 jammed the famous center court while the two battled more than two hours under a hot sun.

It was the first Wimbledon title for Petra, who was ranked No. 1 in France as far back as 1939 and who came back to reclaim his tennis form after spending two years in a German military prison. He is the first Frenchman to wear the Wimbledon crown since Henri Cochet won it in 1929.

All American Women's Final

An All American final was assured in women's doubles tomorrow wheen the top seedeed teams of Louise Brough and Margaret Osborne and Pauline Betz and Doris Hart came through on schedule in today's semifinals.

The Misses Brough and Osborne, four-time American doubles champions, had little difficulty subduing their Wightman Cup teammates, Dorothy Bundy and Mrs. Patricia Canning Todd, 6—4, 6—2, but the Betz-Hart combination was given a real scrap before it advanced over Mrs. Kay Stammers Menzies and Mrs. Jean Nicoll Bostock of Britain by 3—6, 6—3, 6—4.

Both Miss Betz and Miss Hart were somewhat off form in the losing first set, netting and outing many simple returns, but they grew steadily better as the match progressed. In addition to meeting in the doubles final, Miss Betz and Miss Brough also will fight it out for singles laurels, and Miss Brough will, as well, participate in the final of mixed doubles.

The husky California girl assured herself a very dull day tomorrow when she and Tom Brown, the kid from San Francisco, battered down the top-seeded mixed doubles pair of Harry Hopman of Australia and Margaret Osborne of San Francisco, 6—3, 6—3.

Meet Bundy, Brown

Their opponents in the final will be Dorothy Bundy and her Australian partner, Geoff Brown, who beat Budge Patty and Pauline Betz today, 12—10, 6—2.

The final of men's doubles will see Jack Kramer and Tom Brown pitted against the Australians, Dinny Pails and Geoff Brown. Both teams advanced through the semifinal on Thursday.

Petra, seeded no higher than fifth, proved himself a surprisingly improved player over his prewar form as he battled his way to the singles championship. He defeated the tournament's No. 1 seeded favorite, Dinny Pails of Australia, in the quarter-finals, and subdued the young San Francisco sensation, Tom Brown, in the semifinals.

For a time today it appeared the giant might overwhelm Brown, the stubby, ambidextrous newcomer from Down Under who had not lost a set in six previous matches.

Van Horn Tops Kovacs in Pro Tennis Play

Philadelphia, July 5 (AP).—Welby Van Horn, national professional tennis champion, scored an upset today by defeating third-seeded Frank Kovacs of Oakland, Calif., 6—4, 6—3, in the quarter final round of the middle States professional grass court tennis championship matches at the Philadelphia Cricket Club.

The victory sent 25-year-old Van Horn of Atlanta, Ga., into a semifinal round meeting with Bobby Riggs, world's professional champion, tomorrow. Riggs, former Chicagoan, now of Los Angeles, Calif., gained the semifinals earlier in the day by virtue of 6—4, 6—3, triumphs over Wayne Sabin of Reno, Nev.

The other semifinal round to be held tomorrow will match two Davis Cup and national championship rivals of amateur days—Don Budge, Los Angeles, and Fred Perry, former British ace. Budge, starting slow, brought his famous backhand into force in the second-best victory of the day to subdue John Faunce, Los Angeles, 7—5, 6—2. Perry had comparatively easy 6—4, 6—3 triumphs over Jack Jossi of Oakland, Calif.

Tomorrow's battle between Budge and Perry will be their first since 1941, when Perry defeated Budge for the national pro title at Forest Hills, N. Y.

Player Says Mexicans Violated His Contract

Mexico City, June 11 (AP).—Andres Julio Baez, pitcher and outfielder from the Dominican Republic, has filed a complaint with the Federal Conciliation and Arbitration Board saying the Mexican Baseball League has violated a contract with him.

Baez told the board he signed a contract for one year with the league at a $250 monthly salary plus expenses, but that he was dismissed after playing for Tampico a short time.

Another Lewis

Marine Hero Takes Lead In Columbus

Columbus, Ohio, July 5 (AP).—John Lewis, a 32-year-old Marine veteran of the battle of Guadalcanal, gave par and his better known contemporaries a beating today as he took a one-stroke lead at the end of the first 18 holes of the $10,000 Clumbus Invitational Open Golf tournament.

Lewis, playing in only his second major tournament since his discharge last September, clipped three strokes off par for a 69 which gave him the hairline edge over a half dozen others, including Ben Hogan, the Hershey, Pa., slugger who is the Nation's leading golf money winner for 1946.

Bracketed with Hogan in the 70 department were Henry Ransom of Houston, Tex.; Ray Mangrum of Los Angeles, brother of National Open Champion Lloyd Mangrum; Jim Ferrier of Chicago; Harold (Jug) McSpaden of Sanford, Me., and Tom Cloran of East Liverpool, Ohio, an Ohio State University sophomore and a complete unknown as far as major tournament competition is concerned.

Lewis was in military service for three years and eight months, 29 months overseas. He won five battle stars and a presidential citation and was in on three initial landings, including the one at Guadalcanal.

Hunter Tricolor To Mathematician

Culpeper, Va., July 5 (AP).—Meander Farm's 8-year-old gelding, Mathematician, showed his class again before a holiday crowd of 10,000 at the Culpeper Horse Show by winning the Hunter Tricolor, his fourth championship of the year.

Mathematician, fast taking the greatness that once was solely the property of Mrs. Elizabeth Perry's Cornish Hills, scored 22 points—4 blues and 2 seconds out of 6 starts. The bay son of Mr. Khayyam and Miss Emma was superb as he took the blue in ladies hunters. He was handled alternately by Dewey Clatterbuck and Mrs. Perry but it was with Mrs. Perry handling him that he beat her own Cornish Hills who scored 12½ points.

Pete Reiser Dropped, McCormick Added

New York, July 5 (AP).—Pete Reiser, ailing Brooklyn outfielder, was dropped from the National League All-Star baseball team today at the request of the Dodger management and President Ford Frick said that First Baseman Frank McCormick of Philadelphia Phils had replaced him on the roster.

The All-Star game will be played in Boston's Fenway Park next Tuesday.

Holmes Enters Lanham Races

"Wild Bill" Holmes, one of the better little car racing pilots of the United States last night had forwarded his entry blank for Tuesday night's midget automobile races at the West Lanham (Md.) Speedway.

Managing Director Irvin Fried disclosed that Holmes expects to wheel his No. 3 Curtis-Offenhauser into action, and will be out to end the monopoly enjoyed by George Fonder and Dutch Schaefer at Lanham during the past four weeks.

Tigers Beat Tribe, 7 to 5 On Homers

Detroit, July 5 (AP).—Grabbing the slugger's role heretofore reserved for Hank Greenberg, Outfielder Roy Cullenbine of the Detroit Tigers plastered two homers today and drove in four runs as Detroit took a 7 to 5 twilight decision over the Cleveland Indians.

For Cullenbine the brace of circuit smashes constituted his fourth and fifth four-baggers in two days off Cleveland pitching.

Virgil (Fire) Trucks coasted to his 10th pitching victory after the Tigers scored three runs in the fifth inning for a 4-0 lead. Trucks went all the way to yield nine hits, two more than the Tigers collected off Red Embree and Don Black.

The twilight game attracted 30,979 fans and hiked Briggs Stadium attendance to 138,692paidforfive dusk contests this season.

G. W. U. Names Sadusky New Football Aide

Al Sadusky, former star tackle at Western Maryland College, has been named assistant football coach at George Washington University, it was announced yesterday by Max Farrington, director of men's activities.

Sadusky will assist Neil (Skip) Stahley, the Colonial' recently-appointed head grid coach.

Sadusky's appointment at George Washington is significent, in that he learned his football under Stahley at Western Maryland when Skip was assistant to Dick Harlow.

After his graduation from Western Maryland, Sadusky attended Columbia University and earned his master's degree. He then took over the coaching reins in both football and basketball at Pottsville (Pa.) High School from 1939 through 1942. He has five years of professional football playing under his belt, two with the Shenandoah (Pa.) eleven, and three with Paterson, N. J.

The former tackle entered the Army in 1942, and became a captain. The addition of Sadusky completes the G.W.U. coaching staff.

In commenting on the acquisition of Sadusky, Stahley said: "Al is one of the greatest tackles I have ever coached."

Mrs. L. Cuvillier I. S. Weekly Victor

Mrs. Louis Cuvillier yesterday fired a 101-25, 76 to take low net honors in the weekly ladies' day tournament at Indian Spring Golf and Country Club.

Mrs. Harold DeVolt won the fewest putts contest with 32, while Mrs. Edward Lockett of Kenwood, won the guest prize with a 98-22, 76.

Bears, Badgers Play Home-Home

Madison, Wis., June 19 (AP).—Harry Stuhldreher, University of Wisconsin football coach and athletic director, announced today that the University of California eleven would meet Wisconsin in an intersectional game here Saturday, October 11, 1947.

Wisconsin is scheduled to play California at Berkeley Saturday, September 28, of this year.

Recheck Shows Gesture Won Class A Yacht Race

Hamilton, Bermuda, July 5 (AP).—A recheck of figures in handicaps allotted the various crafts in the first Newport-to-Bermuda yacht race since 1938 today gave first place in Class A to A. H. Fuller's 57-foot sloop Gesture, out of New London, Conn.

The winner made the 635 miles in five days 1:18.28 of elapsed time. The sloop's handicap cut this down to three days 23:10.20.

New York, July 5 (INS).—The 10-round bout scheduled at Madison Square Garden tonight between Chuck Taylor of Coalport, Pa., and Billy Graham, New York lightweight, was called off due to a back injury suffered by Graham in training.

$25,000 Event Draws Field of 9 at Arlington

Chicago, July 5 (AP).—Nine thoroughbreds were named today for tomorrow's $25,000 added Myrtlewood Stakes at six furlongs at Arlington Park.

They were Mrs. Roy Carruthers' Jimmie, Silver Star Stock Farm's Chipamink, Miss Gertrude Donovan's Fighting Don, Maine Chance Farm's Perfect Bahram, J. Howard Rouse's Three Dots, Dee B. Stable's Hydrant, Bobanet Stable's Bobanet, Mrs. V. E. Smith's Sirius and Mrs. Ada L. Rice's Sir Bim.

Feller to Remain With Tribe, Says Prexy Bill Veeck

Tucson, Ariz., July 5 (AP).—Pitcher Bob Feller stays with the Cleveland Indians, Bill Veeck, jr., new president of the club, said today at his southern Arizona ranch.

"Sure we've had offers of $300,000 and more for Feller, but we aren't accepting," Veeck said in commenting on a statement by Comedian Bob Hope, one of the Indians' owners, in Des Moines that he understood a $300,000 offer had been made for the star hurler.

"Show me a couple of guys as good to replace him and we might consider," Veeck said. "But you can't pitch dollar bills from the mound, so Feller definitely stays with the Indians but definitely."

Mrs. Jani Winner At Congressional

In a match against par ladies' tournament yesterday at Congressional Country Club, Mrs. G. M. Jani won the Class A title with three down to par, while Mrs. E. S. Hanson took second with four down.

Mrs. D. L. Moorman took Class B honors even with par, and Mrs. R. W. Berry had two down for second, and Mrs. C. T. Penn was four down for third. A nine-hole Class C game went to Mrs. J. A. Mount.

Sexton to 'Defend' Mat 'Title' Wednesday

Frank Sexton, recognized world's wrestling champion, will defend his title against Angelo Savoldi, of New York, next Wednesday night at Turner's Arena.

Sexton successfully risked his crown several weeks ago against Babe Sharkey, from whom he won the title, to maintain his undefeated streak here.

2 Jockeys Hurt In Spills at Charles Town

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., July 5.—Two jockeys suffered broken bones today in seperate accidents before a crowd of 7500 this afternoon. Ralph Kirk, of Silver Springs, Md. riding brothers, was the more seriously injured, breaking his left leg in a tumble in the sixth event. Wayne Weber figured in a spectacular spill in the first race but escaped with a broken thumb.

Kirk, who has been riding in excellent style, was aboard H. E. Rulon's Fanchea and tried to pull the filly up when she went lame in the runnnig. The 3-year-old stumbled and Kirk fell into the inside rail. Fortunately no horses were near him at the time.

Bolted Across Track

Weber's injury came when Scotty's Lady, a first-time starter, bolted across the track and E. P. Minor's Big Jack crashed into her. Apprentice J. Baird, riding Scotty's Lady, was unhurt.

The accidents were not as a result of a treacherous track for the running surface was in the best condition of the meeting with a soft cushion and fast. Jockey Johnny Tammaro, Baltimore boy, who has been performing with merit here, celebrated his final appearance in the saddle before beginning a five-day suspension for rough riding by winning the Libby Purse, feature race of the Friday program. He was aboard S. M. Folin's Erato and booted the filly home two lengths ahead of Mrs. E. P. White's Old Harry with Mrs. G. C. Everhart's Titian third.

Erato, a consistent daughter of Petrose, paid $3.40 and was clocked in 1:27 for the about 7 furlongs.

Couldn't Be Dislodged

As usual with Tammaro's mounts, he took Erato to the front and could not be dislodged. Old Harry did most of the chasing and finished second. Titian was third almost all of the way and closed in that position.

The daily double paid $14.60. Oak Hill Farm's John's Teddy won the first as a $4.20 favorite and A. H. Smith's Gallant Doc took the second at $8.40.

In a thrilling finish, the Heloria Stable's Fly Tackle annexed the third race, a purse affair, beating Golden Babe and Craggwood Miss. Fly Tackle, well handled by Jockey Mike Sarno, paid $3.40.

Petra broke Brown's service in the opening game of the first and second sets and went on to win them easily behind his own booming delivery.

Long, Brilliant Rallies

But in the third set Brown's own service began to burn and his two-handed forehand to hit the baseline with regularity. There were many long, brilliant rallies as he pulled out the third set, and more of the same in the fourth which Brown won after Petra once had led at 5—3, and held match point three times.

The Frenchman, though, was not to be denied. Still comparatively fresh and full of vim, he bore down at the outset of the deciding set to break down Brown's opening service and went on to victory behind his own lightning delivery. On only one of Petra's five serves did Brown win more than one point as he saw his chances run out.

Petra said he expected to compete in the American championships at Forest Hills later this summer.

Digges and Reid Sign For Important Roles In O'Neill's 'Iceman'

THE RETURN to activity of so illustrious a playwright as Eugene O'Neill is a matter of high moment, and the Theater Guild is treating it as such.

After years of nebulous reports of O'Neill's industry at his typewriter, three new manuscripts have been dropped into the Guild's hopper. Not too much is known about them, as yet, by anyone save their author and Theresa Helburn and Lawrence Langner, who are the Guild.

Eugene O'Neill

The announcement that "The Ice Man Cometh" will be their first production for next season, nevertheless, has caused an atomic disturbance up and down Broadway and across the continent and wide speculation as to the casting.

There have even been rumors that there is a tentative part in the piece for Washington's up-and-coming Bibi Osterwald, who already has gone far on the "big time" since serving her initiate as a popular member of the old Roadside, Civic, Willard Roof and Catholic University companies. These, however, have remained rumors.

More to the point is the definite announcement that Dudley Digges and Carl Benton Reid have been signed for two important male roles in "The Ice Man." This is an earnest of the caliber of players the guild feels the O'Neill work demands. Two more able character actors would be hard to find.

A graduate of the Abbey Theater Players of Dublin, Mr. Digges also was a powerful figure in the early development of the guild. His experience is as broad as his talents are wide.

Mr. Reid is another whose abilities have been fully rounded by long and honorable service behind the footlights. His performances which stick most tenaciously in Washington's memory are his portrayal of Charles Dingle's younger brother with Tallulah Bankhead in Lillian Hellman's "The Little Foxes," and of the irascible Clarence Day in the Lindsay-Crouse perennial, "Life With Father."

After numerous avowals and denials, his importance to "The Glass Menagerie"—being what it is, Eddie Dowling will be the director of "The Ice Man Cometh" and Robert Edmond Jones will design the settings.

At this point, the soaring hope is that Miss Helburn and Mr. Langner will not forget that Washington is one of their regular two-week stands, usually "prior to New York."

The Hippodrome Theater's cycle of revivals of French film classics will enter its final round today with a repeat engagement of "Grand Illusion" and "Carnival in Flanders." When this distinguished double-feature bill was presented at the Hip several weeks ago, the SRO sign was in daily evidence. For the benefit of those whose French suffers from high school accents, both of these masterpieces are elucidated by comprehensive English subtitles.

Whatever the present status of Howard Hughes' joust with the Johnston Office (nee Hays) and its advertising code, an enlarged advertising budget of nearly two million dollars has been appropriated for Nation-wide exploitation of "The Outlaw," according to Harry L. Gold, Hughes' general manager of world distribution. While the bulk of the bulging budget will be expended in newspaper and magazine advertising, a major exploitation feature of the campaign will be a national tour of the first Navy dirigible to be converted from its wartime subchasing duties to civilian use. Bearing giant signs, illuminated for night flights, the blimp, named "The Outlaw," will fly over 39 cities in 11 States. This promotion, including original cost and weekly opreating expense, will nick the two-million for approximately $350,000.

Youth to Have "Spot"

Since a canvass of its age group by a team of 21 teen-agers disclosed that 90 per cent of them read the amusement pages of the local press, this seems the logical place to make known that a new Washington night spot of unique design will open its doors Monday to a limited public. Its name is the Club Teen.

Created to serve Washington's youth exclusively, with a maximum age limit of 21, Club Teen will be located at 614 E st. nw. There will be dancing nightly, Monday through Saturday, from 8 to 12. Refreshments will be available at minimum costs.

Cover charge will be 75 cents per person and juveniles of either gender may attend in couples, groups or singly.

Sponsored by the YWCA, Club Teen will make available to the Capital's 'teen-agers the benefits of months of study of leading night spots from Coast to Coast and surveys of precisely what goes to make up an enjoyable evening. No negative rules will be in force. Facilities to cover all forms of legitimate fun will be provided. Volunteer hosts and hostesses, themselves not much over 21, will be on duty at all times.

Another excuse for mentioning it here is that music will be furnished by the Bob Starr Quartet, with additional entertainment taking the form of regular appearances of surprise acts and big name guest stars.

Club Teen is a nonprofit enterprise. All funds will be used for additional equipment and maintenance. So now you know.

Beginning Monday, the National Theater will have to coast along without the steady hand of Manager Eddie Plohn on the throttle. Eddie has fallen victim to a vacation. Somebody ought to warn the fish down around Tilghman's Island to keep their big mouths shut these next coupla weeks!

U. N. 'Star' Party Last Formal Event

The actors in "Voice of the Turtle" now playing at the National Theater will be guests of honor at the United Nations Club tomorrow evening. Miss Louise Horton, Miss Peggy French and Harvey Stephens will highlight the "All Star Evening" which has been arranged as the last dance at the clubhouse until after Labor Day.

The summer program, to begin Monday, will feature swimming, tennis and hiking at various estates in and near Washington, including the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Page Hufty, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Col. Randolph Leigh, Dr. and Mrs. Walter Boyd and the British Embassy.

The pool at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Gruman was open to members and guests July 4.

LOOK, ACE—WHAT IF LENA WANTS T' BACK OUT O' THIS MARRIAGE HERSELF?
THAT'S NOT LIKELY, JUG-EAR!
MAYBE SHE THINKS I'M NO GOOD—MAYBE SHE'S TIRED O' ME—
NO EXCUSES, JUG-EAR—YOU ASKED HER TO MARRY YOU AN' YORE GOIN' THROUGH WITH IT!
THESE MEN ARE THE BIG, STRONG, SILENT TYPE, AREN'T THEY, JANE?
I DIDN'T NOTICE THAT JUG-EAR WAS TONGUE-TIED—WELL MAYBE NOT SILENT—BUT STRONG—LAW, DO YOU RECKON THEY'RE TOO STRONG?
WHATEVER ACE IS I LIKE IT!

Broadway Potpourri

New York, July 5.—A Broadway press agent dined with three men in a popular Chicago restaurant a few nights ago. When the dinner was over the press agent sent a bus boy for some newspapers, so that he could see if any of his publicity stories had appeared. The bus boy returned with the papers, and each of the diners

Mae West

On the front page were the photographs of five men wanted for questioning in the Regan murder case, in which there is a rumored link to the Capone mob. The press agent glanced at the five photos. Three were pictures of the men with whom he was dining. He turned to his companions. They, too, had seen the photos, and then each of them slowly, calmly and deliberately turned to the sports section.

General Littlejohn will succeed General Gregory as head of the War Assets Corporation. . . . Former Governor Edison of New Jersey, in the Stork Club the other night, said that he would campaign against Hague's gubernatorial candidate and make speeches in behalf of the "Democrats for Driscoll" . . . Mae West is pondering over an offer to appear in a movie to be made in England . . . In the meantime Howard Hughes is flying to Chicago on Monday to attend Miss West's premiere there, to decide whether he'll buy the screen rights to her play, "Catharine Was Great" . . . A Midwest mob sent an emissary to Scotland recently and bought a distillery there.

George Bernard Shaw, who will celebrate his ninetieth birthday this month, will continue to write the movie adaptations of his plays. He trusts no other writer, in the handling of his work. Nor does he permit any radio or stage producer to cut any portions of his plays. The lone exception was Orson Welles who, in producing "Heartbreak House," first telephoned Shaw for permission to cut. "I never allowed the Theater Guild to cut, so why should I allow you?" said Shaw . . . "Because they don't know how to cut, and I do," replied Welles. "I cut Shakespeare's 'Caesar' last season, and it was a hit" . . . "Shakespeare, yes. Shaw, no," said Shaw . . . The next week Welles phoned him again and said: "You were right, Mr. Shaw. I don't think your play can be cut, because each line is so brilliant" . . . "In that case," Shaw relented, "you may cut."

Although haircuts cost only 40 cents in the barber shops of the Senate Office Building, the shop is never crowded. The younger men in the building discovered that the barbers specialized in only one type of haircut, "The Tom Connally Bob," which leaves a flowing mane in the back . . . Estelle Taylor will return to the stage in Legend of Lou" which will have its premiere in San Francisco. Lyle Talbot and Jane Darwell will appear in the cast . . . Because of the hot spell in New York, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Katzenberg—who never have been known to miss attending a play opening, and always in the front row seats—will skip Monday's opening.

For the past few months the Reynolds Pen Co. has been working on the development of a new product. The success of this new product will depend upon the surprise element . . . Last month a secret conference of the company's top executives was held. Reynolds' public relations counselor was invited to this conference, where the new surprise product was discussed . . . A few days later, on July 1, the public relations counselor for Reynolds took a new job as public relations counselor to Eversharp.

On Bastille Day in the opera house at Toulon—which suffered more destruction than any other city in France—Lily Pons and Andre Kostelanetz will give a benefit performance with a 100-piece orchestra composed of the Toulon and Marseille Symphonies and musicians of the French Navy . . . Mickey Rooney's father, Joe Yule, who is playing the role of Jiggs in Monogram's movie, "Bringing Up Father," had to shave the hair from his scalp to give a realistic portrayal. Twice a day, during the filming, Yule shaves both his face and scalp. "If nothing else," he told his son, "I'm the only actor who has 5 o'clock shadow on his scalp." . . . Morton Downey leaves for a European tour next month.

A few of the experts assigned as observers at the Bikini tests worked in England during the war, in a military intelligence unit which had one of the top priorities. They worked under the direct orders of the Prime Minister, who said that he wanted no stone left unturned to see that they obtained everything they needed for this work . . . Strange-looking men who were experts in esoteric fields were brought into the unit. The most brilliant of them looked freakish, because they paid attention to nothing except their work. One day Churchill arrived on an inspection tour and was startled. "I told you," he said to the top officials, "to leave no stone unturned, but I didn't expect you'd take me so literally."

In an old trunk which arrived from New York many years ago, Ira Gershwin last week found the faded manuscript of a song which seemed unfamiliar to him. It was by George and Ira Gershwin, but the lyricist didn't remember it. He took the manuscript to the piano and started to peck out the tune. "Soldiers of Belgravia," the song began. Then Ira remembered. He and George had adapted it later to "Of Thee I Sing," and changed it to "Wintergreen for President" . . . Zero Mostel will be the master of ceremonies for CBS's new ad lib show, "Stars at Play" . . . This column's newest outlet is Dublin's Irish Digest.

Gov. Jimmy Davis of Louisiana, the former hillbilly songwriter, soon will have to decide between politics and songwriting, because for the first time, these have become conflicting careers . . . For if Governor Davis signs the anticlosed shop bill for Louisiana, there is one powerful union leader who can take steps in reprisal. Governor Davis has heard that it would not be amiss for James Petrillo, head of the Musicians Union, to advise the union members that the Governor's songs are blacklisted, and that none of his recordings shall be broadcast or plugged. And royalties and ASCAP ratings depend upon plugs.

Budman—Wasser

Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Leon Budman, this city, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Esther, to Melvin Wasser, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wasser, also of Washington. The prospective bridegroom recently received his discharge from the Navy. No date has been set for the wedding.

Hassans on Vacation

The Egyptian Minister and Mme. Hassan and their children are spending several days at Bedford Springs, Pa.

The Merry Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

PRESIDENT TRUMAN attended an interesting private dinner party the other night—a birthday party in honor of his new Secretary of the Treasury, John Snyder.

John was 50 years old, and his new assistant, Detroit's affable Republican Arthur Gardner, gave him a party. Vivacious Mrs. Gardner was a little nonplused when she heard that the President of the United States was coming.

"Now we've got to have a lot of protocol," she half-protested.

Also she hadn't counted on the Secret Service. They came a day early and insisted on inspecting every corner of the Gardner home and garden. Also, they opened up the house next door belonging to Prince Pignantelli, who was away for the summer, and the house of broker George Garrett, in order to make sure no one was lurking inside.

Delightful Mrs. Gardner, however, is a resourceful lady—in more ways than one. Her father drew up the corporation papers for Henry Ford when Ford first started making autos, and was paid in then worthless Ford stock. Mrs. Gardner's father was also smart enough to hang on to the stock.

Eighteen guests attended the dinner, including Senator Barkley, who, because of his wife's illness, seldom goes out to dinner. However, he made an exception in this case and was the first to arrive.

Thirsty Senator

WEARY after a hectic day of trying to pilot price control through the Senate, Barkley suggested a drink. Polite host Gardner demurred. He suggested they should not drink before the arrival of the President of the United States.

"I'll be damned if I'll wait for him," replied Truman's best friend in the Senate. "I've ranked him for years, and I'm not going to be outranked when it comes to a drink now."

The Senator from Kentucky got his bourbon.

Shortly thereafter, the President arrived. Host Gardner promptly shoved his highball behind a potted palm. Barkley didn't.

"They tried to prevent me from having this drink," he remarked to the President. "But I told them I had ranked you for so many years I wasn't going to wait for you now."

Smiling, Mr. Truman agreed.

Other, guests included Gen. and Mrs. Ira Eaker, second highest ranking office of the Air Forces; Gen. and Mrs. Hoyt Vandenberg, nephew of the Senator from Michigan and top intelligence man for the White House; Mrs. Stuart Symington, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War and the daughter of GOP Congressman Jim Wadsworth; Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Ed Foley and wife; Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, widow of Woodrow Wilson's Attorney General; Arthur Krock of the New York Times, chief newspaper defendant of John Snyder; Senate Secretary Leslie Biffle and wife, close friends of the President and from Snyder's home State—Arkansas, and Chuck Fisher, manufacturer of Fisher auto bodies, who served with Snyder on the RFC.

Presidential Toasts

MRS. TRUMAN was absent in Missouri. The British Ambassador, only other invited guest, was also absent because of a previous engagement, but sent his personal Scotch bagpipes along with his Scotspiper. And at an appropriate moment, the dining-room doors were thrown open and in came the piper, along with bagpipes and birthday cake.

Happy John Snyder cut his cake, passed the first piece to his good friend, Harry Truman.

Toasts followed. Lifting his champagne, the new Secretary of the Treasury toasted "friendship."

"Is that why you're here, John?" jibed impish Mrs. Palmer, doubtless referring to the way Truman rewards his friends.

Senator Barkley toasted the many years he and Truman had spent together.

Later, the conversation got around to Comptroller General Lindsay Warren's sensational charges that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation had not kept proper books.

"When is the Senate going to investigate you, John?" Senator Barkley asked the former Chief of the RFC. "I don't want to miss it."

"I'm going to testify right after Jesse Jones," shot back Snyder.

The President said very little. He seemed worried, grim, and unhappy. His chief remark of the evening came when Barkley started to tell a story.

"I've heard that one before," dryly remarked the President of the United States.

It was midnight when the President went home. At 3 a. m. 50-year-old John Snyder departed to catch a few hours sleep before beginning the day's work as Secretary of the Treasury.

Schaaff—Rodden

The engagement of Miss Helen Elizabeth Schaaff to Lieut. Robert M. Rodden is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Schaaff. The wedding will take place in Walter Reed Memorial Chapel Friday.

Miss Schaaff, graduate of Queens College, is secretary to a corporation counsel assigned to Juvenile Court. Lieutenant Rodden, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Rodden, Abilene, Tex., was graduated from the United States Military Academy and now is on leave from Tokyo.

SWEATER MOTHER KNIT IS PROTECTIVE MANTLE

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

Kenneth Harris is back from the wars, and in his duffle bag was the same sweater which is grandmother knit for his father, George E. Harris, during World War I.

"He did wear all through the service overseas that sweater that my mother knit for me," said the elder Harris in a letter to this department, and added:

"Truly it seemed so true that the prayers my mother said for my safety carried on for his for he was so close to death many times. We were also pleased to see that he wore around his neck a little silver cross which Chevy Chase Methodist Church sent him at Christmas, 1943.

"GOD SPARED HIM . . ."

"He told us that one time his group of 200 men were rodered to capture a town but they could not displace the S.S. Nazi troops there and lost many tanks in trying . . . only 40 of the 200 American soldiers survived the ordeal . . . among them Kenneth. There were so many other instances such as this that we do feel grateful indeed that God spared him to us."

The elder Harris, executive vice president of the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association, said another coincidence was that Kenneth was discharged at Fort Meade—the same place where he was discharged 26 years ago—almost to the day and month.

Kenneth was in the 7th Army, 36th Division, 141st Infantry, which captured General Von Runstedt, one of the exploits for which they received the Presidential Unit Citation. Before he entered the service, Kenneth frequently accompanied his parents and his sister, Jane, to the Labor Day weekend D. C. Organized Bible Class Association parley at Western Maryland College, Westminister. There he served as "policeman" for the mock court, and brought the "offenders" before "judge" Page McK. Etchison.

PILGRIMAGE TO MOUNT VERNON

A motorcade of District Christian Endeavorers will leave Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw., July 14 at 2:30 p. m. for Mount Vernon, where ceremonies will mark the golden jubilee of the planting of the Christian Endeavor tree there. The tree, known as the "Peace Oak," is near Washington's old tomb.

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, president of the World's Christian Endeavor Union, and pastor of the Baptist Temple, Philadelphia, will be present, as will Larned Everett Meacham, of La Grange, Illinois, who planted the tree in 1896. Another participant will be Carroll Wright, executive secretary of the International Society of Christian Endeavor. A wreath will be laid on Washington's Tomb.

CHAIRMAN SEEKS OLD-TIMERS

Merritt L. Smith, chairman of the committee for the pilgrimage, is seeking persons who were present at the tree planting in 1896, following the first World's Endeavor convention held in tents on the ellipse south of the White House. Smith can be reached at WOodley 6982. Members of his committee are Frank C. Keefer, Luther Place Memorial Church; Robert R. Crammer, Eastern Presbyterian Church; Olinda Dormaier, Grace Reformed Church; David Heyward, Eckington Presbyterian Church; Major Guy Withers, National City Christian Church; William Werth, Sherwood Presbyterian Church, and Catherine Bunting, Chevy Chase Baptist Church.

PREACHERS' SONS GET DEGREES

Bowers, jr., son of the Rev. Leslie L. Bowers, sr., pastor of Fifteenth Street Christian (Disciples of Christ) Church, 15th st. and Kentucky ave. se., and Winston C. Bell, son of Dr. Harry L. Bell, pastor of Columbia Heights Christian Church.

Bovet Wedding Brings Danish Envoy's Cousin

Miss Beatrice Bovet of Berne, Switzerland, a cousin of the Danish Minister, Henrik de Kauffmann, is due to arrive in Washington tomorrow on the maden voyage of the Cairo-Geneva-Washington air line of TWA.

Miss Bovet is to be a bridesmaid at the wedding of her brother, Eric D. Bovet of Washington and Miss Ethel Mae Lindsey of Minneapolis, Minn., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Lindsey, which wille take place in Minneapolis July 19.

The bride-o-be sevred as a Wave with the Navy's Bureau of Ordnance in Washington. She remained in the service three years and attained the rank of lieutenant.

Mr. Bovet, who became an American citizen in 1933, was born in Switzerland. For a time he served as tutor to James and Franklin Roosevelt, sons of the late President. Since before Pearl Harbor he has been with the Navy Department in the executive offices of the Secretary. A writer and lecturer, Mr. Bovet is the originator of an advanced economic theory, "Anticipatory Production." He also is a composer an dhas written the music for Elizabeth Barrett Browning's poem, "How Do I Love Thee," which will be sung at the wedding. His composition for string quartet, "Allegr oin the Mixolydian," was among the 24 best in the contest of 500 entries held two years ago by the Chamber Music Guild.

Mr. Bovet and his bride will live here.

Return from Vacation

Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Sanborn and daughter, Miss Jean Sanborn, who have been vacationing at Daytona Beach, Fla., and Myrtle Beach, S. C., have returned to their home in American University Park.

Willinghams Back In Chevy Chase

Mr. and Mrs. Harris E. Willingham and their daughter, Sarah, have returned to Chevy Chase after an absence of several years. Mr. Willingham, an official of the Farm Credit Administration, was stationed in the Midwest during the war years. The family visited recently in New York and now is residing at 7001 Connecticut ave.

Miss Willingham will attend Wellesley College this fall.

Town Talk

By Eva Hinton

MRS. ALBERT B. DEWEY and I were sitting on the balcony of Twenty-One in Hamilton, Bermuda, the other afternoon having a gin and tonic veddy, veddy British-like. We hoped that we wouldn't see anyone we knew because we'd rushed straight from the Coral Beach to do errands before the shops closed, and we still bore touches of sand, salt and suntan oil.

We hoped it wistfully and not very sincerely and we were charmed when from the other end of the balcony appeared Wesley Frame and Bernard Diamond and "friends." The latter included Commander MacGowan of the U. S. Coast Guard, skipper of the Eagle, beautiful square-rigged training ship that I'd been dying to visit since she anchored in the harbor the day before.

Last time I'd seen Mr. Frame and Mr. Diamond was at opening of the new rooms of the Kress collection at the National Gallery last winter. (Mr. Frame is married to one of the good-looking Kress nieces.)

After "What in the world are you doing here?" we joined the party and went aboard the Eagle. She had come direct from Bremerhaven under sail, a month of it, but I tactlessly remarked that "I smelled she had Diesel engines too!"

THE Eagle was taken over by the United States from the Germans after the war. She had been used by them as a training ship and, toward the end, as an evacuation ship. The American crew was short-handed and had brought back 40 young German sailors to help them.

Commander MacGowan showed us a very interesting sword of a German naval officer, a present from the British liaison officer in Bremerhaven to the Coast Guard Academy.

After a look 'round the elegantly appointed captain's quarters (those Germans certainly did themselves well, with birch and mahogany panelling and comfortable leather chairs) we went ashore in a launch lent by a Navy officer friend of Commander MacGowan. The Commander had sent his own launch to take one of his crew with a severe case of appendicitis to the hospital at the U. S. Navy Base. I might add that the sufferer had been packed in the Eagle's entire supply of ice!

NEXT morning at 9 "goodby" to heavenly Bermuda and early in the afternoon "hello" (reluctantly) to Baltimore. Arrived home in time to unpack and answer in person a charming invitation from the Egyptian Minister and Mme. Hassan for a buffet supper to honor four visiting Egyptian journalists.

Mme. Hassan, looking like a beautiful little carving in a gown of draped amethyst satin, introduced the guests of honor with an informal, "And here are the BOYS!"

I promised Fahmy Samaha of the Egyptian news magazine, Al Mussa—war, to tell my readers that Egyptian girls go in for driving cars, piloting planes and college educations, just like American girls, and that they do NOT wear veils.

Abdel-Kader Hamza, representative of Al Balagh, sat next to me at dinner and, at my request, showed me snapshots of his attractive wife and year-old son. After dinner I had a chat with Nagib Canaan of the newspaper Al Ahram (by now I begin to realize that Al means THE in Egyptian), which is the most widely circulated paper in the Middle East, (between 150,000 and 200,000). Al Ahram won the world's record for printing the longest journalistic cable when it printed verbatim the British White Paper on the 1929 Anglo-Egyptian negotiations. It also got a world scoop from its London correspondent with news of King Edward VIII's abdication printed eight hours before any other paper.

The Hassans' fourth guest of honor was Galal Hamamsy of Al Kotla. Others I saw included William L. Jenkins; Henry S. Villard of the State Department, who was being congratulated on a fortnight-old daughter; Mrs. Christina Grant; Loy Henderson, also of the State Department; Capt. and Mrs. Lee Parke, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, the Lothrop Stoddards, Constantine Brown and Mr. and Mrs. Barnet Nover.

DON WINSLOW

THAT PUFF OF SMOKE WE SAW MUST HAVE MARKED THE LAUNCHING SITE OF THE EXPLOSION... NOW, WHICH DIRECTION WAS IT?
IT'S THIS WAY, SKIPPER... I THINK.
LET'S GET GOING AND... I HOPE YOU'RE RIGHT!
IT SURE LOOKS DIFFERENT DOWN HERE THAN IT DID FROM UP THERE!
SO YOU'RE CONFUSED, EH?
LOOK, SKIPPER! WHAT'S THAT?

TERRY

SLITS COULDN'T HAVE CARRIED THE DRAGON LADY UP THIS FORK OF THE TRAIL THIS QUICKLY WITHOUT LEAVING A TRACE ... BUT NO SOUND COMES FROM HOTSHOT CHARLIE ON THE OTHER BRANCH ...
OL' HOTSHOT'S TEACHER ALWAYS SAID I HAD A THICK SKULL ... AND I AM GRATEFUL FOR IT RIGHT NOW! HOW MUCH KICKING CAN A MAN ABSORB?
AS SLITS CONTINUES TO BELABOR HOTSHOT CHARLIE, THE DRAGON LADY REACHES INSIDE HER JACKET ...
...AND BRINGS FORTH A COMPACT ...

JOE PALOOKA

THERE'S ANOTHER SHOT ... CAME FROM THAT DIRECTION ... COME ON ... HURRY!
JOE ... JOE ... ARE YOU ALL RIGHT?
JOE ... DID HE GET YOU, BOY ... LET ME SEE WHERE'S THE WOUND ...
WHEW ... HULLO, VINCE ... I COULDN'T TALK ... I WAS WINDED ... I'M NOT HURT ...

MARY WORTH

ONE MONTH HAS PASSED SINCE THE WEDDING--AND TONIGHT WE FIND IAN, BINNIE AND MARY WORTH, REUNITED AT THE OPENING OF SELENE'S PLAY!
IAN, DARLING! WASN'T SHE WONDERFUL? --SO INCREDIBLY YOUNG!
WHAT A JOLT THOSE FANS WOULD GET IF THE KNEW WHO YOU WERE, BINNIE!
SHH!--SHE'S GOING TO MAKE A CURTAIN SPEECH!
THERE'S SOMETHING WRONG!--THEY'VE TURNED THE SPOTLIGHT ON US!
LADIES AND GENTLEMEN--THIS IS THE PROUDEST MOMENT OF MY LIFE! NOT BECAUSE OF YOUR GRACIOUS APPLAUSE, BUT BECAUSE I CAN INTRODUCE TO YOU ---TO THE WORLD--- MY DAUGHTER!

MYRTLE

GEE WHITH, MYRTLE! I'LL BET WE THOULD HAVE GONE HOME LONG AGO!
YOU WAIT HERE! I'LL GO HOME PAST YOUR HOUSE AND CALL YOU BACK
CONTROL TOWER TO PILOT — PREPARE FOR CRASH LANDING!

MICKEY FINN

WHAT DOES THE DOCTOR SAY ABOUT HER, KITTY? HE OUGHT TO KNOW IF SHE'S FAKING!
I CAN'T PIN HIM DOWN, MICKEY—HE KEEPS SAYING IT'S HER NERVES!
I'D LIKE TO TALK TO HIM—WOULD HE BE IN HIS OFFICE NOW?
I THINK SO! I BELIEVE HE DOESN'T START MAKING HIS CALLS UNTIL TEN O'CLOCK!
IT'S MISS PAYNE'S NIECE, DOCTOR—AND THERE'S A BIG GOOD LOOKING MAN WITH HER!
HMM! TELL HER I'LL SEE HER IN A FEW MINUTES!
SO HE'S CHECKING UP ON ME, EH? WELL, YOU KNOW WHAT TO TELL HIM, DOCTOR!
VERY WELL, PAULA!

DIXIE DUGAN

HE HAS A PRETTY SWANK PLACE—WHOEVER HE IS. IS IT PART OF MRS. HACKETT'S PROPERTY?
I REALLY DON'T KNOW—YET

WINNIE WINKLE

FATHER, JUST TAKE IT EASY! HERE ARE YOUR PAPER AND SLIPPERS--
AND HERE'S A BOX OF CIGARS FROM MR. BIBBS! HE SAYS HE HOPES YOU'LL BE ABLE TO GET YOUR FRIEND TO SELL OUT--- WELL, IT LOOKS PRETTY GOOD, WINNIE!
AH'HHHH! I ELECTED RUMDUM PRESIDENT OF MY PIN CO.-NOW BIBBS WANTS TO PAY ME TO GIT RUMDUM TO SELL HIM MY BUSINESS!
ELECT AN' COLLECT--THAT'S ME!!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

THE AMBULANCE IS COMING BACK FROM THE HOSPITAL, KING... THEY CAN RESUME THE RACE NOW!
I WANT TO GET A REPORT ON DRAKE'S CONDITION...
I HAVE BAD NEWS FOR YOU, SERGEANT--THAT DRIVER DIED ON THE WAY TO THE HOSPITAL!
ROSCO, YOU'D BETTER REMOVE THE FAULTY STEERING KNUCKLE BEFORE SOMEONE ELSE DOES... WE'RE WORKING ON A MURDER CASE NOW!

PENNY

LOOK AT THESE WEEDS! I THOUGHT YOU TOLD ME YOU WEEDED THE GARDEN, PENNY.
BUT I DIDN'T SAY I WEEDED ALL THE GARDEN, FATHER.
THAT'S QUIBBLING, PENNY. IT'S A HALF TRUTH. IT'S LITTLE BETTER THAN AN OUTRIGHT FALSEHOOD!
A HALF TRUTH?
I GUESS YOU'RE RIGHT, FATHER. YOU MEAN IT'S LIKE WHEN WE WERE HOUSE CLEANING AND I SAW YOU AND YOUR DENTIST ON THE GOLF COURSE...
RIGHT AFTER YOU TOLD MOTHER YOU HAD AN APPOINTMENT WITH HIM!
AHEM...AH... A MERE COINCIDENCE—BUT QUITE A DIFFERENT MATTER.

DOTTY

I SPEND SO MUCH TIME IN AN APRON I FEEL LIKE A SISSY!!
RING
I'LL ANSWER IT, DADDY!
I'D LIKE TO SEE THE LADY OF THE HOUSE--
SHE ISN'T HERE--
JUST A MINUTE-- I'M THE LADY OF THE HOUSE!!

YOU KNEW ALL ALONG THE GOLD BRICKS WERE REAL, AND THAT'S WHY YOU HELPED THOSE CROOKS SELL THEM. PROF. AL KEMIST, HERE, IS THE MIRACLE MAN OF SCIENCE WHO SUCCEEDED IN TRANSMUTING BASE METAL TO GOLD!
A BRILLIANT DISCOVERY, PROFESSOR!
BUT NO MORE STARTLING THAN YOU YOURSELF!
YES, MY X-RAY VISION TIPPED ME OFF THAT FOXTRAP'S GOLD BRICKS WERE THE REAL THING! I ACTED ACCORDINGLY.
IT WAS GROSSLY UNFAIR OF YOU NOT TO SHARE THE INFORMATION!
BUT I'VE SOME NEWS THAT SHOULD HELP SALVE YOUR WOUNDED FEELINGS, FOXTRAP. YOU'RE RICH!
WHAT?!

D. C. Stores' Inventories 10% Heavier

By S. Oliver Goodman

Inventories of Washington department stores at the end of May were 10 per cent heavier than last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported last night.

The increase came in the face of a 26 per cent increase in sales during the month, the bank added. For the first five months this year local sales showed a 19 per cent gain over the same 1945 period. The sales pace so far this year indicated a new all-time high inasmuch as last year's volume set a record.

Regionally, the fifth reserve district showed a 30 per cent increase in store sales for May and a 21 per cent upturn for the five-month period.

Credit customers in Washington, the bank report showed, were slower on payments than the average in the reserve district. Collections on charge accounts due here on the first of the month were 53 per cent during May, as compared with 56 per cent in Baltimore and 61 per cent for other cities in the region.

Meanwhile, the Richmond Reserve Bank reported yesterday that Washington store sales in the week ended June 29 were 22 per cent heavier than in the week last year. For the four weeks ended June 29, the dollar volume here was 22 per cent more than in the like 1945 period.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Heads Retail Committee

Appointment of George G. Steele, retail advertising manager of the Philadelphia Bulletin, as chairman of the retail committee of the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers Association, was announced yesterday by the bureau's governing board. Steele succeeds Donald Bernard, advertising director of The Washington Post who resigned because of pressure of other activities.

New Lithograph Plant

Two war veterans have joined forces to open a new lithograph plant, Colortone Press, at 609 Massachusetts ave., nw They are Alphons J. Hackl, former captain in Military Intelligence Reserve, and Jack S. Hyams, former sergeant with the Third Army intelligence unit. Before the war, Hackl was associated with Krinstadt Advertising Agency of this city, while Hyams was employed in New York as a lithographic expert.

Personnel Notes

Miss Doris Miller, formerly with American Airlines in Washington, has been appointed assistant to the executive director of Feeder Airlines Association with headquarters here.

Directors of NBC elected William F. Brooks, the network's director of news and international relations, to be a vice president. Brooks, a former news editor of the Associated Press, had directed the NBC news division since 1942.

R. G. Evans has been named general agent of Canadian National Railways Washington office, succeeding A. P. Lait who moved into the New York City office.

Two Chains' Sales Spurt

G. C. Murphy Co. reported June sales of $9,086,809, up 9.7 per cent from $8,281,910 in June 1945. Sales for the first six months of the year amounted to $48,380,417, or 10 per cent above $43,975,027 in the comparable period last year.

Montgomery Ward & Co. reported sales for June totaling $75,427,667, an increase of 51 per cent over June sales of $50,002,538 last year. Sales for the five months ended June 30 this year amounted to $374,250,408, up 42 per cent over $263,121,907 in the comparative 1945 months.

UAL Orders 15 More Liners

United Air Lines has announced the purchase of 15 more 3-0-3 transport planes from the Glenn L. Martin Co. of Baltimore. United now has 50 of the 300-mile-an-hour twin-engine planes on order. The contract calls for $12,857,000 and deliveries are expected to start about a year hence.

Earnings Statements

Zenith Radio Corp. and its wholly owned subsidiaries reported a net loss of $169,506 for the fiscal year ended April 30. The calculation was made before renogotiation of war contracts and refund of Federal taxes had been completed, the company said.

National Pressure Cooker Co. and subsidiaries reported for the six months ended March 31 net profit of $1,292,923, equal to $5.17 a share, compared with $336,503, or $1.35 a share, in the comparable period of 1945. The 1946 earnings included those of its Canadian affiliate, which was not in operation during the 1945 period.

Tiny 'Bead' to Help Battle Moisture

New York, July 5 (AP).—Creation of a tiny bead that soaks up moisture like a sponge in everything from battleship machinery to fishing tackle and the family salt shaker was announced by Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. as one of a half dozen new industrial products and processes.

Dr. John C. Dean said the product, to be known as Sovabead, already is being used to assure machinery maintenance in the laying-up of reserve American merchant and naval fleets, and that units are being developed for warehouses in which furs, grains, cement and textiles are stored. A technique is being developed so that Sovabeads can be used to help dry out homes in humid climates.
